Dr. Wynekoop to Appeal 25-Year Sentence to Pen

Supreme Court Says Yes. Imitate the Criminal? Faces, Foreheads; Not Legs. Nudity for Housewives.

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

THE SUPREME COURT, five to four, decides that the new deal is a good deal, and the old law of supply and demand, the sacred rights of the individual "to do what he chooses with his own" are not as important as they used to be.

Specifically, the Supreme Court sustaining New York state's law to control milk and milk prices, says a state may fix prices by law, and the citizens must submit.

This decision, taking from individuals, and giving to the state, the right to run business, was handed down just as President Roosevelt, broadcasting, was urging national support of the new plan.

THIS IS a most interesting and important period in the history of America and the world.

Everywhere important changes that may lead to prosperity or disaster are made, dictatorships in Italy, Germany and Turkey, attempts at Communism in Russia, which will probably end in some new form of industrial capitalism.

Germany says the individual ceases to be important, and here the government, once supposed to keep out of every business, is running every business, or telling how it shall be run.

The world is like Columbus, embarking on his voyage, and like Columbus, who thought he was going to India, and landed in America, we may all somewhere find a "happy landing."

IN A CHICAGO murder case, a sixty-three year old woman doctor, accused of murdering her daughter-in-law for insurance money, told her lawyers to "gamble everything on acquittal."

Carried to the witness chair, the jury excluded from the court, to avoid too much sympathy, fainting, falling, bruising her face on the floor of her prison cell, the accused woman, Dr. Wynekoop, struggled for freedom.

The district attorney urges the jury "to do to Mrs. Wynekoop what she did to her young daughter-in-law, Rheta."

This is not meant literally. If it were, according to the state's contention, it would be necessary to chloroform Dr. Wynekoop, and then shoot her in the back on an operating table.

There was a time when "civilized justice" did to a criminal what he had done to his victim, and worse.

When Ravaillac murdered Henry the Fourth, "justice" first broke him on the wheel, tortured him in other ways, then poured melted lead into his intestines, mutilated him frightfully, disemboweled him, quartered his body, pieces of it were eaten in various parts of Paris. You would not like to see modern justice imitate that exactly.

Chinese justice once ordered criminals sawed in two, lengthwise, and there were punishments in Japan, before the era of western civilization, too revolting even to be mentioned.

C. L. TWEED, justice of the peace in Cocoanut Grove, announces a new beauty contest, in honor of the "legions" gathering in Florida. Young ladies in the contest will be fully clothed, judged by their faces, not by their legs, a blessed relief.

If bullfrogs on frog farms in Louisiana had a beauty contest, only the legs would count, legs being all of the frog that counts. You don't care about the frog's expression or intellect, and only ask for fat thighs.

SOMETHING MORE is asked of a young woman, destined, presumably, to become a mother. Her brain is the important thing, since, according to Huxley, it puts her above a savage bushman as far as the latter is above a blade of grass.

Well-shaped legs and a simpering face do not make a beautiful woman. In any beauty contest the forehead should count sixty, eyes twenty, mouth and figure each ten per cent.

IN PHILADELPHIA, the Rev. Ilsley Boone, assisting Mrs. Carl Peters at a conference on nudism, says:

"Clothes were first worn for protection and warmth, then for adornment to attract members of the opposite sex, also for religious reasons, to ward off evil spirits, which may have led to the adoption of the girdle."

The Rev. Mr. Boone further says:

"There is really no reason why the women of America should not adopt domestic nudism, and go about their business of keeping house stark naked."

THEY USED to do that, according to evolution's teaching, when they kept house in trees, and the earliest caves. You hoped the thing had been outgrown. Think of the drafts, in winter.

The clergyman declined to answer a lady who asked:

"What should a lady nudist do if a brush salesman called at the kitchen door while she was going about in the altogether?"

Ingeniously numerous are the ways in which human beings, women included, can be foolish.

Once men wore shoes so long that it was necessary to tie the toes to their knees and laws were passed against that foolishness.

Women wore crinolines thirty feet around, hats three feet high, and some wore ten petticoats. Now some want to wear nothing. Nature is working out something mysterious there.

SIX BRIDGES IN COUNTY UNSAFE

Fife and Kelly Argue For U. S. Funds to Replace Spans

By JOHN COWAN
Sun-Telegraph Correspondent.

WASHINGTON, March 7.—Six Allegheny County river bridges are obsolete and condemned and are only open to traffic through great risk to life, the House Committee on Interstate Commerce was advised today in a report submitted by County Solicitor J. P. Fife.

Representative Clyde Kelly brought the matter to the attention of the committee in arguing immediate need of replacing the condemned structures, provided for in bills authorizing the construction of the bridges by the Allegheny County Authority, with federal funds.

The application is pending before the Public Works Administration, the bridges being included in various needed projects aggregating about $31,000,000.

The condemned structures are:

Brown's Bridge, Homestead; Highland Park Bridge over the Allegheny, the Glenwood Bridge; the Dravosburg Bridge, the Rankin Bridge and Youghiogheny Bridge at McKeesport.

It is pointed out that a new span is necessary across the Monongahela at Pittsburgh in order to relieve traffic on the Liberty and the Smithfield Street bridges, which are declared to have reached the point of traffic saturation.

The argument is advanced that the bridges should be replaced at once by toll bridges since the county is not financially able to provide free bridges. It is estimated that the loan from the government could be liquidated through tolls, rentals, etc., within 20 years, at the end of which time the spans could be turned over to the county as free bridges.

'WET' NAMED TO RUM BOARD

International News Service.

HARRISBURG, March 7.—Heeding demands for an avowed "wet" and experienced liquor dealer, Gov. Gifford Pinchot today appointed W. Worrell C. Wagner, of Philadelphia, as the third $10,000-a-year member of the State Liquor Control Board. The appointment was for two years.

Wagner was a member of the firm of John Wagner & Son, liquor importers, for 32 years previous to prohibition.

Appointment of Wagner fills the vacancy created when Thomas W. Phillips, Butler oil man and now a candidate for the Republican gubernatorial nomination, refused to accept the post at the time the board was created last November.

Wagner's appointment was made after the state liquor stores system already had been set up by Robert S. Gawthrop, former Superior Court judge, and A. Marshall Thompson, former dean of the University of Pittsburgh law school, who comprised the liquor control board since last November.

Dr. Wynekoop Battling 25-Year Pen Term for Murder of Son's Wife

DR. ALICE LINDSAY WYNEKOOP . . . JURY DECIDED QUICKLY

Elderly Dr. Wynekoop, whose jury needed only 36 minutes—two ballots—to find her guilty of the slaying of her pretty daughter-in-law, Rheta, and to fix her sentence at 25 years' imprisonment.

Conviction by Jury Brings Move for New Trial

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP.)—Only a higher court, or death, can save Dr. Alice Wynekoop from the penitentiary.

A jury convicted her last night of slaying her daughter-in-law, Rheta, in the "operating table murder" that horrified the nation. It fixed her sentence at 25 years imprisonment in the penitentiary. Only two ballots were taken.

The murder drama that began when Rheta's body was found, a bullet in the back, on Dr. Wynekoop's operating table last November 21, kept its interest to the last.

With the jury ready to report its verdict, Judge Harry B. Miller summoned the jail physician to stand by the 63-year-old woman, and be ready to administer heart stimulants, lest the shock strike her dead.

Roosevelt Cheerful, Completes New Book

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—President Roosevelt reported himself as feeling quite gay today after finishing work on a book to be published next month. Asked about the title, Mr. Roosevelt smiled and said that was up to the publishers.

The 300-page book was described as mostly a compilation of the President's official declarations during the first year of his administration.

STRIKE PARLEY SEEKS PEACE

Representatives of striking employes and officials of the Aluminum Company of America met today to seek a settlement in the strike that closed the New Kensington district plants last Thursday.

The meeting, beginning at 11 a. m., was still in session late today at the company offices in the Gulf Building. The Aluminum Workers' Union was reported ready to accept an 11 per cent wage increase based on August 1 wage schedules and prepared to demand the checkoff system of collecting union dues.

National officers of the union accepted the 11 per cent wage offer made by the company last week, but it was rejected by workers. Company officials said the increase would return wages to the 1929 level.

Russian Emigrants Expel Tolstoi's Kin

BELGRADE, Jugoslavia, March 7.—(AP.)—Because he opposed a proposal that Russian emigrants should support Japan if she fought the Soviets, Count Ilya Tolstoi, grandson of the noted writer, was expelled from an emigrants' meeting last night.

NRA IGNORES HOUR CUT PROTEST

Industrialist Board To Rule on Exemptions

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 8.—Insistence that industry shorten hours and give a compensatory increase in wages will be the aim of the administration in spite of complaints by the code authorities now meeting in the capital, it was indicated today by Administrator Hugh S. Johnson.

Johnson intends to propose a general reduction of hours in all industries in a radio speech closing the conference tonight, but will suggest that industries unable to comply be given opportunity to show cause for exemption before a board of industrialists and administration authorities.

PLAN OPPOSED

This plan was brought out this afternoon at the conference on employment after George Sloan, president of the Textile Institute and a member of the textile code authority, declared "it would be a terrible mistake," to make the announcement of a general plan to decrease hours and increase wages.

Johnson said he had formulated no hard and fast rule in regard to the plan to curtail hours and that it was not the intention of the administration to issue any executive order in the matter.

Instead he proposed a conference of industrialists beginning this week to consider the hour and wage provisions of individual industries before deciding if the work week should be shortened. Johnson declared:

"Nothing the President or I have said means there will be an executive order demanding that all industry be placed under shorter hours. But there are some industries we know must agree to shorter hours. There are others in the doubtful zone."

ATTACKS ON NRA

Closing hours of the conference were featured by widespread attacks on operations of the NRA, ranging from criticism of failure to invoke importation-embargoes to protect American-made goods to the charge that the codes permitted large manufacturers to out-produce and out-sell their smaller competitors.

Meanwhile, it was learned, the administration is considering several major steps to aid small business, oppressed by the opera-

Wealthy Man Kills Self at Mortuary

Despondent because of a prolonged and painful illness, Mearkle hailed a taxicab and ordered the driver to take him to "317 North Fifty-second street," the address of a mortuary. As the taxi reached its destination, Mearkle drew a pistol and shot himself through the heart.

Government By Personal Whim Is Despotism

Usurpation leads to further usurpation of dictatorial authority.

The President seems to think he can easily enlarge his already extended powers by merely weaving into a request for new authorizations some passing references to the "existing emergency" and the "prevailing unemployment."

This is the familiar balustrade upon which he again leans in casually asking Congress for power PERSONALLY to negotiate and conclude tariff treaties WITHOUT their submission to the Senate for ratification, WITHOUT recommendation or guidance by the Tariff Commission, WITHOUT check from any quarter, WITHOUT the concurrence of any other person or official body, WITHOUT revealed method or proven principle or established precedent or even thorough survey of the facts.

AUTOCRATIC authority is so substituted for constitutional prerogatives and procedure.

The President becomes the panjandrum of American business, with power, by personal treaties, independently of any action by the representatives of the people to raise or lower tariff rates FIFTY PER CENT in all trade bargains with foreign nations.

Conceding the virtuous intentions of the President and without dwelling upon the naive insensibility to business actualities revealed in his proposals, it is MANIFEST—CLEAR BEYOND ALL SHADOW OF DOUBT—THAT THIS POWER SHOULD NOT BE GIVEN AT ALL.

THE AUTHORITY BELONGS TO CONGRESS AND SHOULD BE EXERCISED BY CONGRESS!

IF CONGRESS, in its servile desire to surrender its functions, should confer more of its powers on the President, that power in this instance should be limited strictly to the right to raise tariff rates

MORGENTHAU AIDE LINKED IN PROBE

Official of Air Line Assails Conference Held By Brown

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—Testimony received by the Senate Banking Committee that J. P. Morgan and Company sold 4,500 shares of United Aircraft stock shortly before government cancellation of the airmail contracts was cited in the Senate today by Senator Robinson (Rep.) of Indiana, as evidence that the "international bankers" had advance information on the action.

Robinson read to the Senate the names of the Morgan firm members and James Seligman as sellers of air stock during the two-week period before the contracts were cancelled. The Indiana senator commented:

"It would be interesting to know how they learned about it. Evidently the money changers have not been driven out of the temple."

LINKS MORGENTHAU AIDE

Robinson said he understood Earl Bailie, former adviser to Secretary Morgenthau, was connected with the Seligman banking house. He added:

"Evidently the Seligman's knew all about it and the international bankers generally knew all about it ahead of time.

"This is certainly food for thought in connection with one of the most ruthless and high-handed actions ever taken by this or any other government."

Robinson's remarks followed testimony before the Senate's special airmail committee that the United Aircraft and Transport Corporation had hired Lehr Fess, son of Senator Fess (Rep), of Ohio, in the interest of "expediting" passage of the Watres airmail act in 1930.

BIG PAY FOR FESS

Paul Henderson, vice president of the company, who told of hiring the Senator's son, said Fess had earned his fee of $3,000 or $5,000 in two days.

Henderson also testified that J. Bruce Kremer, former Democratic national committeeman from Montana, had been employed by United.

The Watres act provided for the air mail system set up by the Hoover administration.

Air operators, before the passage of the Watres act, called on former President Hoover to present objections to it and were told to come back after learning more about the act, according to Henderson, who said he and C. M. Keyes, then

Billy Sunday Out For Elbow-Bending

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., March 7.—(Universal.)—Billy Sunday, on vacation here, today declared he was "all for plenty of elbow-bending until prohibition returns." The 71-year-old evangelist explained:

FORD SON GETS KIDNAP THREAT

MIAMI BEACH, Fla., March 7.—(AP.)—Edsel Ford, Detroit automobile manufacturer, went fishing two weeks ago when kidnapers were reported to have threatened him, but he was watched by guards who carried machine guns, the Associated Press was informed today by a nigh ranking officer of one of the three law enforcement agencies reported to have supplied the guards.

The threat, according to the officer, was made in Detroit before Ford came here, February 18, but some indication an attempt might be made was said to have prompted a request for protection.

The guards returned to routine duties when the boat came back to Miami Beach after five days of fishing by Ford in the lower Florida Keys.

Ford could not be reached.

A man who answered the telephone at the Ford cottage late tonight said he was of the manufacturer's party, but refused to give his name. He said "it would be silly for Mr. Ford to make any statement as it would only incite the half-cracked kind that try kidnaping."

DILLINGER HUNT AIDED BY U. S. FORCES

Jail Breaking Outlaw Eludes Wide Net In Manhunt

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP.)—The federal government joined today in the hunt for John Dillinger, escaped desperado.

Dillinger, "seen" in a hundred different places, but found nowhere, has been on the loose five days now and is the object of one of the greatest manhunts in recent years.

Two attaches at the Crown Point (Ind.) jail from which Dillinger made his "movie" escape, were taken into custody late yesterday, charged with aiding and abetting.

One was released later on his own recognizance by Judge William Murray. He is Deputy Sheriff Ernest Blunk, fingerprint expert of the jail, of whom Judge Murray said:

"I'm satisfied there was nothing off-color in Blunk's performance. He didn't have any nerve—that's all that was wrong with him."

Turnkey Sam Cahoon, 64, is the other jail guard under arrest.

U. S. ENTERS CASE

Authorities were guarding Cook County's banks against a possible raid by the bandit leader and fugitive members of his squad.

Gov. Paul McNutt had before him a report of the management of the Crown Point Jail. He said he could not remove Sheriff Holley, pointing out that the power was vested in the county's Circuit Court.

The head of the Lake County Commissioners called on Sheriff Holley to resign "for the good of the Democratic party," but the woman Sheriff promptly refused.

PAL'S TRIAL CONTINUES

LIMA, O., March 7.—(AP.)—For the second day, Harry Pierpont, former running mate of John Dillinger, sat in the Allen County Court and heard prospective jurors explain how they felt about sending a man to the electric chair.

Pierpont is on trial charged with murdering Sheriff Jess Sarber, who was slain last October 12, when several members of Dillinger's gang freed Dillinger from the local county jail.

A tentative jury of nine men and three women had been seated today.

Miss Jessie Levy, defense attorney, continued to emphasize the heavy guard and the barricade around the jail as prejudicial against her client. Pierpont laughed when one of the prospective jurors said he thought the military arrangements were a "protection to the community" against raids on the courtroom.

Miss Levy asked each veniremen whether the chains of the defendant's legs gave the impression that Pierpont might be "a bad boy."

BANK ROBBED, AIR HUNT ON

SIOUX FALLS, S. D., March 7.—(AP.)—Authorities of South Dakota and Iowa searched by airplane and automobile today for the machine-gun bandits who robbed the Security National Bank and Trust Company of $46,000 in cash Tuesday after terrorizing employes and citizens.

The robbers held 1,000 townspeople at bay, wounded a policeman, and forced five persons, including four women, to accompany them as shields against the fire of pursuers.

The women, carried on the runningboard of their car several miles out of town, where they were released, were Mrs. Alice Biegen, Mrs. Mildred Bostwick, Miss Emma Knabach and Miss Mary Lucas. Leon Olson, teller, and fifth prisoner, was released earlier at the city limits.

Reports that John Dillinger, escaped killer, may have led the gang, were discounted by officials of the bank, who said there was no resemblance by any of the bandits to Dillinger.

Fear of Dillinger Has Lima 'Jittery'

LIMA, O., March 7.—(INS.)—With the city "jittery" over persistent reports that John Dillinger, escaped desperado, plans a foray here to free an alleged henchman from jail, Lima was thrown into a near panic today by a fusillade of machine-gun fire which proved to be merely target practice by the National Guard.

PICKETS ATTACK HOTEL WORKERS

Several pedestrians were endangered this morning when a mob of striking hotel employes and sympathizers stoned a pair of Negroes in Tunnel street. No arrests were made.

The fighting was a replica of yesterday morning's outbreak in which one Negro woman was injured and seven others arrested.

The stoning began in Tunnel street and Wylie avenue and continued along Tunnel street to Bigelow boulevard. Police broke up the mob near the William Penn Hotel.

Trouble began when the mob surprised two Negroes returning from the hotel after escorting a half dozen Negro women to their jobs.

Two pickets were fined $2 or five days in jail today after a hearing in Central Police Court when two women employes testified the pickets threatened them as they walked out of the hotel yesterday. Those fined were Viola Mitchell, Negro, of 2217 Forbes street, and Cleto Velleto, 1628 Edgebrook avenue. Both denied the threat.

A. C. Jewett, executive secretary of the Pittsburgh Regional Labor Board, today said he was hopeful the hotel strike was nearing an end, although strikers and the hotel management have rejected suggested terms.

WEIRTON COAL, UNION AGREE

UNIONTOWN, Pa., March 7.—(AP.)—The Weirton Coal Company, subsidiary of the Weirton Steel Company, has signed a working agreement with representatives of the United Mine Workers of America covering operations at the Isabella mine in Fayette County.

Announcement of the signing was made last night. The agreement is similar to others recently reached by union leaders with operators of the steel company-owned (captive) mines.

William Hynes, president of District 4, U. M. W. A., and other union chiefs represented the workers. General Manager O. G. Leichliter acted for the company. Signing of the agreement will send 700 men back to work after having been idle four weeks.

PARTY LEADER QUITS POST

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—Another lawyer-vacancy in the ranks of the Democratic National Committee was assured today as Arthur F. Mullen, of Nebraska, handed in his resignation—with President Roosevelt's consent.

In a warmly personal letter addressed to "My Dear Arthur," the Chief Executive said he appreciated "the motives which prompt you to take this action." He expressed his "personal friendship" and added he still counted upon his advice on matters of national welfare.

The President's recent criticism of committeemen practicing law before government agencies here was said by Mullen not to have constituted his reason for resigning.

He denied what he termed a published "inference that my activities as a practicing attorney in Washington were unethical and embarrassing to the administration."

Alabama Walkout Held Code Violation

BIRMINGHAM, Ala., March 7.—(AP.)—Striking miners in Alabama coal fields today were held by a two-to-one decision of the Coal Labor Board, Division 3, to have violated the provisions of the bituminous coal code in walking out without attempting to negotiate their grievances. The miners were ordered to return to work next Monday, or have their petition dismissed.

tions of the industrial codes, and to further promote the NRA.

PLANS ENUMERATED

As enumerated this afternoon by Divisional Administrator Whiteside, they included:

1—Loans to small business, maximum of $12,500, to run for three years. They will be made through regular banking channels and to be guaranteed up to 80 per cent of their value for a two-year period.

2—Organization of a new mortgage plan to grant loans to capital industries not exceeding $50,000.

3—Creation of a special division within the NRA to administer tariff protection.

4—A policy of placing the federal government on the same basis as any other purchaser under NRA codes.

5—Steps to allow individual communities to determine their own prices on the vote of 70 per cent of its citizens—this to be allowed because some codes prescribe fixed prices.

6—NRA to finish drafting the remaining 300 codes for industry within next two weeks.

Mr. Hoover interrupted them, he said, to ask that they familiarize themselves with the subject and come back.

After talking it over, he and Keyes decided not to return to the White House, Henderson said.

Keyes, he said, changed his mind about "the plan."

"What plan?"

TELLS OF PARLEY

Henderson explained he meant a plan to enact legislation authorizing air mail contract awards without competitive bidding—"just as mail is put on the trains."

Henderson described the much-discussed 1930 air mail conference as having appeared highly "improper," even to assembled aviation me. He told the committee the purpose of the meeting, as outlined by Postmaster General Brown, was hard to take seriously. He said:

"The whole nature of the proposal had no thought in it of competitive bidding.

"I couldn't fail to understand that."

Henderson said he told Chester W. Cathell, aviation attorney, at the meetin, that he considered the session so improper it should be adjourned.

Held anywhere except at the Portoffice Department, Henderson said he expressed himself, it would have been illegal.

Henderson testified he protested to William P. MacCracken, chairman of the meeting, that the Watres bill did not contemplate the purposes of the meeting, and received the reply.

"You're crazy as hell."

The discussion of contract awards seemed so far-fetched, Henderson said, that he applied for several lines "facetiously."

Henderson said his idea of route extensions had been that "they were like the tail of a dog and shouldn't be longer than the dog."

EXCHANGE BILL BOMBARDED

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—Bombardment of proposed legislation for federal control of stock exchanges continued today on both sides of the Capitol as it was made known at the White House that enactment of some measure is expected at this session of Congress.

Elimination of municipal bonds from the scope of the Fletcher-Rayburn stock market control bill was recommended to the Senate Banking Committee by Archibald B. Roosevelt, son of the former President.

The atttude of President Roosevelt on this specific bill was not given. The White House emphasized when it was introduced that the President was taking no position on it.

John Dickinson, assistant secretary of commerce, told the House Interstate Commerce Committee he was against the pending legislation in its present form.

Government Investigations Must Not Be Turned Into Inquisitions, Says R.W. Child

People and press of the country are unanimous in support of the exposure of real scandal—whether it be cold meat from a former administration or hot dishes, such as the eternal whispering gallery of Washington prophecies—are on their way up from hell's kitchen.

EVERYONE of decency in the United States wants its government clean. Especially in a period when the taxpayer's money faucet is wide open, is there reason for the closest inspection to see that this river of money may reach the harbor of public welfare and the dry fields of unemployment, its waters free of pollution.

But unfair rumor and unjust implication and hints and bullying by investigators, whether these be Congressional committees, or grand jurors, or so-called secret agents of various departments, ARE ALMOST AS LOATHSOME AS CORRUPTION ITSELF.

Not all Congressional committees are unfair in spirit, but Washington is beginning to believe that the temptation to be unfair, where witnesses are summoned and when they can be put on a skewer and roasted, is great indeed.

It takes a peculiarly fair chairman of committee, or Senator, or Congressman, not to find his own political capital is served by turning a "hearing" into an inquisition.

GREAT SENSE of justice is required in such a man not to use the weapons of publicity, the hint to reporters, the nasty gibe, intended to please the public, in order to be "smart" at the expense of the life-built reputations of men no worse than he.

The investigator who really serves the public is the one who does not hint and gibe so that the public receives an impression of guilt hung on the neck of decent and innocent men, but the one who can produce the evidence to CONVICT, as Senator Walsh, of Montana, used to do.

There are men, of course, whose convictions cannot be obtained of touching the jam-pot, but those fingers are covered with jam in the eyes of almost everyone.

There may be men who are guilty and can be found guilty.

BUT INJUSTICE of the rankest kind may be heaped, by those who swing for their little day in the limelight the power of politics and of bureaucracy, upon innocent men who have served the public good.

Every time that is done, whether by a Congressional hearing, or by investigators of whom we now have a bumper crop, or by some political figure who can release a slimy hint of authority to the press, there is INTOLERABLE TYRANNY.

This tyranny is not intolerable only because it is in itself almost always inspired by selfish aims and sadistic egotistical outrage.

It is intolerable also because it ruins the effectiveness of those who, in a better atmosphere, can put ferrets on the trail of real corruption and wring its neck.

It is intolerable also because it is sometimes used for the very purpose of a smoke-screen TO HIDE THE PLACES WHERE CORPSES ARE REALLY BURIED. And every reporter in Washington knows it.

CHANGE IN U. S. POLICY SEEN

LONDON, March 7.—(Universal.)—Possibility of a change in American foreign policy was seen today by the diplomatic correspondent of the London Daily Telegraph in connection with the mission of Richard Washburn Child in Europe. The correspondent said:

"It may be of interest to point out that Child, who was formerly United States Ambassador in Rome, has recently been criticizing American foreign policy in the Hearst press.

"Inasmuch as this policy was so largely influenced by Norman H. Davis, President Roosevelt's choice of Child as a new diplomatic explorer is highly suggestive."

New Air Schedule To Coast Announced

For the first time, as a result of new schedules now in effect, an airplane trip from Pittsburgh to Los Angeles can be made with the loss of only one-half of a business day.

Under new schedules of the Pennsylvania Air Lines and United Air Lines, passengers leaving Pittsburgh at 1:10 p. m. arrive on the West Coast at 7:45 a. m., it was announced today. Similar service is available to San Francisco, Portland, Tacoma, Seattle and Spokane.

DAVIS LEAVES LONDON

LONDON, March 7.—(AP.)—Norman Davis, United States ambassador-at-large, departed for Stockholm today, ending a six-day "unofficial" visit to London. The American disarmament expert said:

"There is nothing for me to say now regarding disarmament, as I have been here purely in an unofficial capacity. I expect to clean up my work in Stockholm in two or three weeks and then I may return to London.

"I don't know now whether I will return directly to America or stay in Europe. It all depends on the developments in the disarmament situation whether I am needed at this time."

In Stockholm, Davis will devote himself to his assignment as chairman of the International Committee of Creditors reorganizing the Kreuger interests. By the time he is through there, it is expected France will have responded to the British disarmament plan. He is likely to return here to discuss it with British officials.

GEN. FOULOIS CHANGES HIS TESTIMONY

Procedure Changed, Not Contracts, He Says

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—Testimony he previously had given that Harry H. Woodring, Assistant Secretary of War, had chaiged specifications for airplanes was denied today before the House military committee by Maj. Gen. Benjamin D. Foulois, chief of the Army air corps.

A few minutes earlier, Woodring himself testified he had not changed specifications for $7,500,000 worth of planes.

PROCEDURE CHANGED

Summoned by the committee, Foulious said the only change made by the Assistant Secretary in the $7,500,000 deal had been "as to procedure only."

Representative Rogers (Dem.), of New Hampshire, asked:

"You didn't tell the appropriations committee the change was as to procedure only?"

"That is what I meant."

"The only thing you had in mind was the change ordered by the Secretary from negotiation to competition?"

"Yes, sir. I could very readily have explained the whole thing, but I did not do it at that time."

Foulois also was closely questioned about a "radiogram" sent over his signature to officers at Wright Field, Dayton, O., asking for a list of officers who had drawn salaries from private airplane companies while on leave from the Army.

RADIOGRAM CITED

That radiogram ended:

"A negative report is desired if appropriate."

Rogers asked:

"What was meant by that language?"

Gen. Foulois answered:

"I haven't the slightest idea what was meant by that."

He added that he had no recollection of the radiogram.

Four to five hundred messages a day are sent from his office, Foulois said. He added:

"And if I had to read them all I would not get much else done."

Rogers asked:

"What possible construction could you put on that 'negative report' language except that it was a desire to cover up as far as possible?"

Foulois replied:

KNIFE AT NECK, FOILS ESCAPE

HUNTSVILLE, Tex., March 7.—(AP.)—Guard Howard Bass yelled while a convict held a knife to his throat, and an attempted escape of five men from the Texas State Penitentiary was frustrated today.

Three of the five prisoners were shot and wounded by guards. The other two surrendered.

As Bass shouted, Gus Gray, a guard, fired, wounding Pete Finch, who held the knife. The others dashed for two ladders against the wall.

Charley Frazier, who led an unsuccessful dash for liberty several weeks ago, and Edward McArthur, were shot down from the ladders. Robert Hill and Roy Thornton escaped the fire of the guards.

Press Gag Proposed At NRA Conference

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(AP.)—Government censorship of newspaper as far as the NRA is concerned was advocated at a code administration conference today by Jack Wallace, of San Antonio, Tex., a member of the shoe rebuilders' code authority.

He claimed the nation's newspapers were 80 per cent Republican-owned, controlled or operated, and were building up the Republican party for the 1936 campaign.

SHERIFF HOLLEY'S CAR, STOLEN AT CROWN POINT, WHERE IT WAS ABANDONED BY ESCAPED JOHN DILLINGER IN CHICAGO

Youthful Death Suspect Studies in Jail Cell

The 19-year-old bandit and murder suspect shunned wild west and detective thrillers to study his Spanish and Latin books.

Warden John McNeil said:

"He sent home for the books yesterday. He said he wants to put his lost time from classes to good use."

Davis, a senior student at South Hills High School, is awaiting trial for the murder of State Highway Patrolman Herbert Brantlinger last September, near Bridgeville.

He was lodged in the jail Monday after waiving extradition from Carlyle, Ill., where he was first arrested for shooting a deputy sheriff.

State police say they have a written confession from Davis for the Brantlinger crime.

He said he would plead "not guilty" when brought to trial.

'Battling' Congressman Must Stand Trial

WASHINGTON, March 7.—(INS.)—Representative Francis Shoemaker, husky Farmer-Laborite Congressman from Minnesota, played ring-around-a-rosy with the District Attorney's office today and ended up exactly where he began—faced with a warrant charging him with assault of Charles Newman, slightly-built taxicab driver.

Newman swore out the warrant after, he charged, Shoemaker knocked him down twice during a traffic tie-up dispute and then defied a policeman to arrest him because:

"I am a Congressman and I can tie up traffic for an hour if I want to."

Today, Shoemaker called on Assistant District Attorney David A. Hart to demand that the charges be dismissed "at once."

Hart shot back:

"Nothing doing. You'll have to see Mr. Leslie Garnett, the District Attorney."

"I'm too damned busy to be bothered with that," said Shoemaker, and strode from the office.

Nevertheless, a few moments later, he showed up at Garnett's office where, stenographers and clerks to the contrary, he insisted on seeing Garnett personally.

Newspapermen thronged the corridor outside the office. From the inside came shouts and the sounds of a heavy fist banging the desk. Garnett was heard to refuse definitely to drop the charge.

"Then," shouted Shoemaker, "I want a perjury warrant issued for the taxi driver and his witnesses."

"Now, now," cajoled Garnett, "wouldn't it be better to wait until after the trial."

"Trial!" snorted Shoemaker, "there ain't going to be any trial."

"Oh yes there is," Garnett assured him. "There are plenty of policemen in town to see you are brough to trial."

FLOWERS SENT BY POLICE SQUAD

Curious Barred From Viewing $4,000 Casket

While the strains of Nettie Gordon's three favorite hymns still linger on the air, laden with the heavy perfume of countless flowers, her handsome $4,000 casket will be closed today forever.

When Will Davis, professional singer, concludes his rendition of "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere," the age-old favorite, "Abide With Me," and "In the Garden," the heavy oval plate glass sealing device will be fastened in place and the closed bronze casket borne by pallbearers to the waiting hearse.

CURIOUS BARRED

The night life queen's last journey from the spacious front parlor of her apartment at 12 East North avenue to the curbstone will be hidden from curious eyes by an enveloping canopy which stretches from door to street.

According to members of the family, a North Side Lutheran minister is to officiate at the services. Interment in Uniondale Cemetery will be private. Nettie will be buried beside her mother and father in Division 2 of the cemetery in a spacious family lot which bears a single monument with the name "Gordon" carved across it.

Efforts of family and close friends to keep curious strangers from gazing on the velvet-clad Nettie in her bier continued to be successful. No one whose name or association with the dead "underworld queen" was unknown to the eternally vigilant doormen, ever reached the inner portal of apartment "B".

MAID GUARDS DOOR

A Negro maid opened the door to the chosen few who were led from the hall through a sitting room, and through French doors into the high-ceilinged parlor. On one wall a mirror, reaching halfway to the floor over a fire place, was almost hidden by banked flowers and ferns and palms. Out of a corner peeked a bronze statue lighted by three amber bulbs.

Roses predominated in the floral tributes paid by countless friends to the dead Nettie. An elaborate basket of roses and lilies from John Verona stood at the foot of the magnificent casket. To the left was a floral piece from the Pittsburgh motorcycle police. Another bore the name of A. M. Turn in gilt letters on the ribbon.

Several floral pieces banked about the room bore the legends, "Aunt" and "Sister" in gilt letters on the ribbons and one bore the words "Aunt Na," said to be the name Harry Gordon's children had for their "Aunt Nettie."

BLISS WRECKED BY 'IN-LAWS,' SAYS MATE

Young Bride's Parents Took Her Home, Holmes Charges

His bride's parents thought she was too young to wed and took her back home, Carl Holmes, 27, state mercantile investigator, of 506 Lyndhurst avenue, Mt. Lebanon, testified today in his divorce case against Marjorie Mueller Holmes, of North Highland avenue.

Holmes testified before Judge Elder W. Marshall that after their marriage, October 25, 1930, his bride, then 20, lived with her parents until November 8, when the pair moved into a furnished home in Mt. Lebanon. She remained only one day, then returned to her parents, he said.

A letter from Holmes' counsel, now Judge Ralph H. Smith, to the girl's father, Edward G. Mueller, president of the Gas Industries Company, brought this reply, according to the letter as introduced in evidence:

"We wer copposed to our daughter's marriage until she was older and had completed her education . . . We will refuse to receive him (Holmes) at my home and will continue to provide a home for my daughter so long as she elects to remain with us, as she is now doing."

Holmes charges desertion. The case is not contested.

MOTHER OF 18 ARRAIGNED IN SWINDLES

Accuse 'Woman Ponzi' Of Fleecing Three Of Life Savings

International News Service.

PHILADELPHIA, March 7.—Mrs. Anna Beswick McElroy, 55-year-old "female Ponzi" and mother of 18 children, was arraigned today on charges of fleecing three women out of their life savings. She was held in $5,000 bail for further hearing on March 14.

Accused of participating in Mrs. McElroy's latest episode of a career that already includes three stretches in prison, the woman's husband, Edward McElroy, 45, was also arraigned and held in $1,500 bail. He is a former guard at the House of Correction in Holmesburg, Pa., where he met the prisoner who was later to become his wife.

ACCUSER FAINTS

Mrs. Mabel Clark, an elderly woman and one of the three who accuse Mrs. McElroy and her husband of having mulcted them, fainted in court today after she had testified that, while her husband lay dead in their home, she advanced $147 to the "female Ponzi."

Detectives charged that Mrs. McElroy used the same old device, having told each of the women that she is the principal heiress to a million-dollar estate in Germany, but that she needed finances with which to carry on litigation in order to receive her inheritance.

BARED 'DOUBLE LIFE'

Mrs. McElroy, then known as Mrs. Beswick, first attained the public limelight 10 years ago when, during her trial for swindling, she testified that she had been leading a double life, dividing her time between two husbands.

She admitted on the witness stand that she had lived alternately in the home of her first husband and father of her children, Samuel E. Beswick, and in the suburban Fox Chase home of William C. Martin, banker.

ASTOR TRYING TO 'FORGET'

SHANGHAI, March 7.—(AP.)—John Jacob Astor III, now in Shanghai, did not come to China for pleasure.

He is here trying to forget his shattered romance with Eileen Gillespie, the New York debutante and Junior Leaguer, who set society abuzz when she broke her engagement with Astor and canceled their wedding—scheduled for February 6.

Astor, who is 21, said today that he is roaming the world "trying to forget." He added:

"I don't like to discuss it. What more can I say?"

He plans to leave for Europe soon.

BANK'S TELLER 'LOST' 11 DAYS

Elton Luker, 30, a teller in the First National Bank of Duquesne, has been missing for 11 days, the Duquesne police reported today.

Luker has been with the bank for eight years; his accounts are in good shape and he is a good worker, according to W. F. Doney, the cashier.

Luker's wife, upset over his disappearance, is confined to her bed in their home at 112 Auriles street, Duquesne.

Luker was last seen in Duquesne Saturday night, February 24, when friends talked with him at a fire in Kennedy avenue, near the Luker home.

The teller indicated then that he was going on a party that night, friends said.

GUNMEN SLAY RACKET CHIEF

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP.)—"West Side Frankie" Pope, 38, once a millionaire and for 20 years a vice lord, bootlegger, drug peddler, gambler, gunman and bomber, was killed today by 10 bullets fired into his head and body.

The scene of the assassination was Pope's room in the Vernon Hotel. Two men with whom Pope had talked over the house telephone and invited to his room were the assassins.

An associate of the Capones, "Mike De Pike" Heitler, Jack Zuta, the Gusicks, the Aiellos and others of Chicago's early gangsters, police described Pope as one of the few survivors of those notorious gangs. The others are dead at the hands of their own kind or have been sent to prison.

Pope's killing was done in the usual thorough fashion of gangsters. He was wounded in the left eye, head, jaw, right side, arms and abdomen. A dozen other bullets missed their target and were buried in the walls.

FATHER KILLS 2, SHOOTS SELF

OIL CITY, Pa., March 7.—(AP.)—A boy and girl are dead of knife wounds inflicted by their father, who then ended his own life with a charge from a double-barreled shotgun.

The father, Axel G. Anderson, 53, a machinist, was found lifeless in the family garage late yesterday beside the gun and a fishing pole, with which he pulled the trigger.

The son, Paul, 15-year-old high school student, who had been excused from classes early in the afternoon, lay under a table in the kitchen. Nearby was the daughter, Mildred, 19.

The tragedy was discovered by another son, Harry, 23, on his return from work.

Unemployed for some time and despondent, Anderson recently got a job with the Oil Well Supply Company and was supposed to have gone to work yesterday.

Instead, he arose early and went to a downtown barber shop where he obtained a haircut and shave. Then he wrote an "excuse" that enabled Paul to leave school at 2 p. m.

Anderson's wife died some years ago. A third son, Edward, lives at 216 Moye street, Mt. Oliver, Pittsburgh.

EAST END CLUB ROW IN COURT

Neighbors didn't agree in court today as to whether the Cocoanut Grove Club, 5124 Liberty avenue, with its night life activities, constituted a nuisance.

In behalf of one group of residents, Assistant District Attorney Harry R. Phillips presented a petition for revocation of beer and liquor licenses granted to the club, on the allegation that it was "a common, ill-governed, disorderly house and common nuisance and disturbance in the neighborhood."

County Detectives Lawrence Kline and David Carlin testified they had bought beer in the club at 12:25 a. m., Sunday, February 17.

Neighbors testified before Judge Thomas M. Marshall that the club is sometimes kept open until 3 a. m. and that the turmoil of persons going in and out kept children awake.

Other residents,h owever, called by Attorney E. G. Coll for the club said that there was nothing objectionable in the operation of the club.

Esther Danzilli, proprietor, and her brother, Frank P. Danzilli, manager, testified the sale of beer was banned after 11:30 p. m. but that the floor show continued until 2 a. m. as permitted by police regulations.

GIBBS, WARTIME HERO, DIES

Col. Elbert A. Gibbs, 52, wartime major of the 15th Engineers and vice president and general manager of the McClintic-Marshall Corporation, died yesterday in Aiken, S. C., according to the Associated Press.

After serving a year in France with the 15th Engineers, organized here, Maj. Gibbs was promoted to colonel at staff headquarters. He was decorated for distinguished service by the United States and France.

Following the war, Col. Gibbs commanded the 324th Engineers here, a reserve outfit. General manager of erection with the McClintic-Marshall Corporation before the war, he was promoted to general manager of the firm following his return from France. He also was a former president of the American Society of Military Engineers.

When the construction firm was purchased by the Bethlehem Steel Corporation and the offices moved to Bethlehem, Pa., in 1931, Col. Gibbs was transferred to Bethlehem. Col. Gibbs was a bachelor.

DOG GETS BATH, LEAVES HOME

Ginger, a small white dog who owes his name to a perky, ginger-colored ear, is being sought by his 92-year-old mistress, Mrs. James S. McKelvy, of 923 North Negley avenue.

The dog, according to Mrs. McKelvy's daughter, Mrs. F. H. Montgomery, disappeared Sunday when he ran from the house for a skirmish after a bath. Because of the bath he was wearing only a light puppy collar instead of a heavier collar.

Ginger is described as a cross between a wire-haired terrier and a spitz—"just plain dog"—with long, wiry hair. His most remarkable characteristics are a shaggy tail which curls upward indomitably; a floppy ear which contrasts strangely with the straight tan one, and a pink and black nose.

Cermak's Nephew Held in Auto Death

CHICAGO, March 7.—(AP.)—James Cermak, 22, nephew of the late Mayor Anton J. Cermak, of Chicago, was held to the grand jury in $2,500 bond yesterday charged with manslaughter and driving while intoxicated. A magistrate held him despite the verdict of a Coroner's jury that the death of Leroy Susanka, filling station attendant, was accidental.

Cermak's car struck Susanka as he was helping push another car to start it.

GANG TORTURE DEATHS BARED

WILMINGTON, Del., March 7.—(AP.)—Results of autopsies indicate that the two gang victims whose bodies were found in a creek north of Wilmington had been tortured to death.

Dr. William M. Fenimore, who conducted the post-mortems yesterday on William H. Schwalbe and Gus Masino, reputed Philadelphia racketeers, says that both men apparently battled for their lives—bruises on their knuckles indicate this—only to be throttled, to be pricked with some heated instrument, possibly an ice pick, and to bleed slowly to death from hemorrhages.

The chests of both victims had been punctured and Dr. Fenimore expressed the belief that both men had been conscious during the two or three hours that they were bleeding to death.

Expressing the belief that Schwable and Masino had been put to death for "chiseling" into the territory of a gang in Chester, Pa., police of that city are holding four beer distributors.

Von Stroheim's Wife Wins Beauty Suit

LOS ANGELES, March 7.—(INS.)—Mrs. Valerie von Stroheim, wife of Erich von Stroheim, director and actor, today held a $125,000 judgment awarded by a jury in her $275,000 damage suit against James Simoniello, proprietor of a Hollywood beauty shop, and his operator, Mrs. Betty Schweitzer.

Mrs. Von Stroheim charged she was burned severely about the face and neck when a hair lotion, being used by Mrs. Schweitzer in a treatment, exploded.

Woman Acquitted In Stabbing Death

A Criminal Court jury today acquitted Miss Mazie Settles, 23, Negro, of 1905 Beamer street, of a murder charge, on her plea that she fatally stabbed Alberta Ford, 24, Negro, of 1907 Beamer street, in self-defense. It was testified that Miss Settles stabbed the other woman last November 24, with a kitchen knife when she attacked her during an argument over a box of candy.

Unidentified Man Hurt in Mystery

Police today were endeavoring to establish the identity of a man found unconscious in Day street, North Side, last night. The victim, about 45, suffering from a probable skull fracture, was found by Motorcycle Patrolman Thomas Morley and taken to Allegheny General Hospital. How the man suffered the injury puzzled police.

WRECK PROBERS SCAN RECORD

The federal board of inquiry probing the fatal Pennsylvania Railroad wreck on the North Side a week ago, today began analyzing information gleamed from witnesses in preparation for an official report to be made to the Interstate Commerce Commission. Last witnesses were heard yesterday.

The board includes H. D. Lyon, Robert Tonkin and H. F. Nason, of the Interstate Commerce Commission, and Guy R. Johnston, representing the Pennsylvania Public Service Commission.

ACTORS IN 'HIT' PLAY STRIKE

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP.)—Protesting the dismissal of three players, the entire cast of "Sailor Beware," one of the longest run hits of the theatrical season, filed a two-weeks' notice of joint resignation and established what was believed to be a Broadway precedent. Notification was given to Charles Harris, company manager.

Courtney Burr, producer of the comedy, was out of the city and could not be reached, but sources close to his office said a 30 per cent salary reduction had been recommended two weeks ago. When, as a unit, the cast refused to accept it, three prominent players were handed their two weeks' notice. Resignation of the cast en masse followed.

Kaufmanns Sue Over Trade Name

Kaufmann Department Stores, Inc., has filed in Federal Court an equity against Nathan Kaufman and N. Kaufman, Inc., of Uniontown, seeking to have the defendants enjoined from using the trade name Kaufman's and the trade name Kaufman's, Uniontown's Best Store, or any other trade name substantially similar to the trade name of the Pittsburgh concern.

Any Beverage That You Quaff Is Patriotic Now

By ARTHUR (BUGS) BAER

No matter what you drink now you are patriotic. The government is fixing the price of tonic for the old, whisky for the mature and milk for the babies.

That's fair enough. Everybody votes but the babies.

The AAA compels the middleman to pay the producer a certain fixed amount. As usual, all the consumer is entitled to is his thirst.

The law gives the distributor the right to a fair profit. And, as Abe Lincoln said, when he wrestled the town bully:

"Everything goes but gouging."

After they get the tonic, whisky and milk tangle straightened out we will mix them up and try 'em.

Man's Row Assures Bed For Ill Children

Unemployed Andrew Tareagolino, of 1421 Halsey way, is to get a bed through the relief workers for his sick children.

That was made plain today at a hearing in North Side Police Court of Edward Kane, 38, of 1313 Carsell street, whose insistence that the bed be delivered, resulted in his arrest late yesterday in the headquarters of the Manchester unit, Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, 1402 Columbus avenue.

Kane testified that he and others went to the headquarters and demanded that something be done at once as there already had been a two-month delay. He refused to leave, when requested and was arrested, charged with disorderly conduct, police said. He was freed by Magistrate J. W. MacGowan.

Mrs. Lola Kardon, relief supervisor, told the Magistrate the delay was due to lack of funds and the fact that the workers in this particular case had 300 families to look after.

She assured the Magistrate the bed would be delivered to the Tareagolino family today. The father mother and two children had been compelled to use one bed, testimony disclosed.

Addressing a courtroom filled with representatives of the Unemployed Citizens' League, the Magistrate urged them to be considerate of the relief workers in view of the handicaps under which they labored.

Mrs. Roosevelt Reaches Porto Rico by Plane

By DOROTHY DUCAS,
International News Service.

SAN JUAN, P. R., March 7.—Mrs. Franklin D. Roosevelt, on the first overseas airplane journey ever undertaken by a wife of a President of the United States, arrived here this afternoon from San Pedro De Macoris, Dominican Republic.

Arrival here ended a flight of approximately six hours from Port Au Prince, Haiti, where Mrs. Roosevelt and her party spent last night.

The schedule calls for only a short stop here before proceeding to St. Thomas, capital of the Virgin Islands, where the American "First Lady" is expected late this afternoon.

Porto Rican officials and cheering crowds greeted Mrs. Roosevelt as she alighted from the plane. Ceremonies here were brief and informal as Mrs. Roosevelt plans to return here for a longer stay after her visit to the Virgin Islands.

CONSTITUTION CHANGE URGED BY EDUCATOR

On the basis of experience, a new constitution for Pennsylvania is long overdue, Prof. Brooke Graves, of Temple University, declared in an address in Philadelphia conference on government a few days ago.

Prof. Graves said the average life of a state constitution in this country is less than a generation and prior to the adoption of Pennsylvania's present one, the state had three, the lives of all of which were shorter than that of the present one, which has been in use 61 years.

Referring to the constitutional changes recommended by a special commission in 1921, Prof Graves said:

"If the revision of the constitution was desirable in the carefree days of prosperity, it is absolutely imperative today. Again and again, as in recent years we have tried to obtain legislation to make effective new and modern concepts of social responsibility and have found ourselves restrained by the dead hand of the past—a past which did not know and had no way of knowing the needs of our people in these difficult times."

RIGHT TO ASK CHANGE

The Philadelphia professor pointed out that the people of the present day, have a right to demand freedom to deal with the new problems with appropriate law. He pointed out that effective and intelligent handling of urgent social and economic problems can be delayed, but cannot be prevented by an unwise insistence upon the continued observance of outworn political and constitutional dogmas.

Prof. Graves said a new constitution should be brief, covering only essential matters, and should not be cluttered with the present masses of legislative details. It would for the main part attempt to state principles of government for an expanding future.

Prof. Graves sees hope that the Legislature would be a smaller body than under the present constitution, and believes the possibility of a single chamber, with members chosen by proportional representation, should be considered.

URGES TAX REFORMS

Prof. Graves said:

"A new constitution should provide for the centralization of tax collection, under the state government. Collection of local taxes on a fee basis would be eliminated. The equalization of assessments should be assured by a state tax commission or state board of equalization."

He continued:

"We need in the first place an enlargement and revision of the units of local government. The size of these units was determined in the days when the county seats had to be within a day's journey from the home of the average citizen. We have the right to expect a modernization of the machinery of local government, eliminating some of the offices altogether and providing for a responsible executive authority."

MAIL WORKERS GET TIME CUT

Just when postal workers were hopeful that 5 per cent of their wage cut would be restored, they were advised of a curtailment of the service by which they are to be furloughed one day a month, until the end of the fiscal year, June 30.

The new order of the Postal Department effects 3,000 postal employes in the Pittsburgh district, 1,500 under Postmaster William M. Turner and 1,500 under Supt. M. E. Evans, of the Railway Mail Service.

In order to meet the situation there will be only one mail delivery in residential sections in the Pittsburgh Postoffice district on Tuesday, the lightest for weekday mail, and a consolidation of routes in some of the business centers.

The new order, issued by Postmaster General James A. Farley, is nation-wide and will become effective at once in Pittsburgh.

RALLY URGED ON TAXPAYERS

A large representation of Allegheny County taxpayers at the state-wide meeting of tax leagues in Harrisburg, March 21 and 22, was urged today by I. Leonard Aronson, president of the Allegheny County Real Estate Owners' and Taxpayers' League.

A proposal to limit voting on municipal, school and county bond issues to owners of real estate will be presented at the meeting by the league.

Aronson was re-elected president of the organization at a meeting in the league's headquarters, 339 Fifth avenue, yesterday. Other officers, all re-elected, are John Dimling, vice president; William J. Charters, treasurer; C. V. Shoup, executive director, and Dr. J. J. Buchanan, chairman of the finance committee.

Illinois Posse Kills Student by Mistake

CHARLESTON, Ill., March 7.—(AP.)—Hershel Petty, 20, student at the Illinois State Teachers' College, was shot and killed when mistaken by a Sheriff's posse for a man who earlier in the evening set fire to a barn.

Possemen said the student failed to obey a command to halt. His car and that of the persons sought were similar, authorities said.

Fire and Theft Losses Permit Income Tax Cut

This is the ninth of a series of articles explaining the proper procedure in making out income tax returns.

Losses from fires, storms, other casualties and thefts may be deducted from income before computing taxes. Such losses do not necessarily have to be connected with the taxpayer's business. If his home or his automobile is destroyed by fire or his house damaged by flood or storm he may deduct the loss sustained. Jewelry or an automobile stolen would be an allowable deduction.

In cases of theft, it must be established that the property actually was stolen. Should circumstances attending the loss leave the taxpayer in doubt as to whether his property was stolen or lost, the claim would not be allowed.

A loss is deductible only in the year in which it is sustained, even though, in the case of a theft or casualty, it may not be discovered until a year later. Losses compensated for by insurance or in some other means are not deductible but if insurance is not sufficient to cover the entire loss, the excess of the loss over the insurance is deductible.

Bad debts also provide an allowable deduction. To be allowable as a deduction, a bad debt must have been determined by the taxpayer to be worthless within the taxable year for which it is claimed and, if books are kept, it must be charged off in the same year. The burden is on the taxpayer to show that a debt claimed as a deduction was without value during the taxable year. A statement should be attached to the return showing the propriety of any deductions for bad debts.

Two Believed Hurt As Auto Hits Fence

Hospitals and physicians were checked by North Side police today for information concerning two men who were believed injured when their automobile struck an iron fence of the Pennsylvania Railroad at West Stockton avenue and Sherman avenue last night. The car ripped away 20 feet of fence railing.

Witnesses told police they placed the men in a passing truck and told the driver to secure medical treatment for them. The truck, police said, has not been seen since.

U. S. SALES TAX SURE, ASSERTS CONGRESSMAN

Enactment of a manufacturers' sales tax is inevitable, Congressman Robert F. Rich (Rep.), Pennsylvania, declared today in a statement to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph.

He predicted when the sales tax is thoroughly understood it will be regarded as the least burdensome of all taxes and fair to all citizens alike.

Congressman Rich said:

"We are assuredly soming to a sales tax. When it shall be thoroughly understood by those who are so vehemently opposing it now, there seems to be no question but that a properly graduated levy upon the sale of manufactured commodities will be regarded as the least burdensome of all taxes and fair to all citizens alike.

"A campaign of education and a careful study of this form of taxation, with consideration to certain classes of exemptions of necessities, I believe will eventually result in its adoption. In Congress more and more of the members are looking with favor upon this method of raising federal revenues."

Overheated Furnace Fires Township Home

Fire caused by an overheated furnace damaged the home of Andrew Yuros, 125 Edwards street, Stowe Township, while the family were at church last night. Damage to the two-story frame dwelling was estimated at $1,000.

NOTED ZIONIST LEADER DIES

Arthur Kahanowicz, 60, nationally active Zionist and merchant of Greensburg, died last night in Pittsburgh Hospital.

He was born in Russia and came to this country at an early age. He was a student of the Bible, and possessed one of the best Hebrew libraries in the United States. He spoke several languages, wrote books and was correspondent for several Jewish publications.

Funeral services will be held Thursday in the B'nai Synagogue. He leaves three sisters and two brothers.

ARTICLE BARES SCHOOL CRISIS

Two hundred thousand teachers have lost their jobs and 2,000,000 children are being denied school training, Dr. John Dewey, veteran educator, of Columbia University, asserts in the March Good Housekeeping in a plea for government aid.

Salaries owing to teachers exceed 40 million dollars, Dr. Dewey says. National planning for schools, as for financial institutions, is imperative, he declares. The cost of educating a child he places at $91 a year and of keeping a man in prison at $300 a year.

WOMAN AND MAN KILL SELVES WITH GUNS

The reported suicides of a woman and a man were being investigated by the Coroner's office today.

While her husband lay ill awaiting the arrival of a hospital ambulance, Mrs. Georgia Cramer, 47, walked into the kitchen of their first-floor apartment at 3635 Liberty avenue, and fired a bullet into her heart last night, homicide detectives reported.

Attracted by the shot, the husband, William Cramer, a retired policeman, rose and found his wife's body on the kitchen floor. He told Detectives Myles Smith and Dennis Timpona that his wife had been furloughed as a store clerk and was brooding over his illness.

Cramer, ill five months, had returned home from the hospital last Friday. Suffering a relapse, he was ordered back to the hospital. Shortly after a reservation had been made at the hospital, the tragedy occurred. Cramer was under the care of a physician at his home last night.

Despondent over unemployment, Herbert Lintleman, 27, of 7211 Idlewild street, shot himself in the chest with a shotgun late yesterday and died several hours later in Pittsburgh Hospital, according to a police report.

To his wife, Katherine, employed in a Homewood laundry, he left a note which read in part:

"I can't find work and can't stand loafing around any longer. Tell Herbert that I went away. Quit your job, get something easy to do."

Herbert is their 4-year-old son.

Long Sales Talks Deplored By Jurist

Judge W. Heber Dithrich yesterday paroled Arthur F. Stephenson, 42, of 235 Oakland avenue, on four charges of false pretense. Stephenson, pleading guilty, had gone to considerable length in telling how he had taken orders for fire extinguishers, which he failed to deliver, when Judge Dithrich remarked:

"I don't see why salesmen cannot adopt less painful methods. Why can't they take the money at once instead of having to deliver an hour's sales talk before extracting it from the befuddled victim?"

ROMANO DENIES KILLING MAYOR

STEUBENVILLE, O., March 7.—(AP.)—Emphatic denial that he killed Benjamin Oliver, former Mayor of Yorkville, was made yesterday by Frank Romano in his first degree murder trial.

Romano, self-admitted Pittsburgh racketeer, denied he ever had known Oliver and said he had not visited Yorkville when the former Mayor was shot down near his home last October.

A positive "No" was Romano's answer to a defense attorney's query:

"Did you shoot Benjamin Oliver?"

Romano was called as a defense witness as a surprise move by his counsel after the state had rested. He corroborated testimony by Thomas Viola, of Follansbee, W. Va., that the two had engaged in liquor running between Pittsburgh and Follansbee. Viola also is under indictment for Oliver's death.

BUTLER LAUDS WAR ARTICLES

International News Service.

NEWTON SQUARE, Pa., March 6. Maj. Gen. Smedley D. Butler, retired commander of the United States Marine Corps, today characterized the series of articles being written by H. R. Knickerbocker, International News Service European correspondent, on the subject "Will War Come?" as a "remarkable reportorial achievement."

The fiery ex-Marine commander who is an outstanding authority on military matters here and abroad, said:

"I am in thorough accord with these articles.

"They are simply splendid. Knickerbocker's diagnosis of the situation in Europe is most accurate and it would be a good thing for everybody to read the articles.

"He presents the case in Europe in a remarkable manner that can be understood by every layman. And that is what we need—the layman educated to know what is happening in Europe today."

Sees Jap-Russian Warfare by Autumn

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ontario, March 7.—(AP.)—Sir Arthur Balfour, noted British industrialist, declared in an address yesterday that Russia and Japan would be at war by autumn, but that there was no prospect of war in Europe for the next 40 years.

War between the United States and Japan, he declared, was impossible. He said tariffs and negotiations between nations which bring acrimonious discussions were more likely to cause wars than cruisers, battleships or armaments.

Machine Gun School For Italian Youths

ROME, March 7.—(AP.)—Night and holiday classes in the operation of machine guns for a selected group of Giovani Fascisti or youths between 14 and 18 years in the Rome area, will begin Sunday.

The night classes will be devoted to learning to assemble and dissemble the pieces. On Sundays and holidays there will be actual practice. The plan will be taken up shortly in other areas.

Airplane Showers Leaflets on Vienna

VIENNA, March 7.—(INS.)—An airplane, which observers believed to be Czechoslovakian, appeared over Vienna at noon today and dropped leaflets of encouragement to Socialist workers in their fight against the government of Chancellor Engelbert Dollfuss. The leaflets said:

"Don't despair. We will come again!"

Prestige of France Is Periled by Attitude of Rumania

leading to the palace. It winds through a magnificent park of hundreds of acres of pine trees whose snowflecked tops reach up and brush the low gray sky. Every hundred yards a guard stopped us and examined our royal pass.

Within sight of the palace at the regular entrance the guard turned us back. At another entrance the guard refused to recognize our pass. With a German engineer who lived in the palace we started down another road. Promptly the guard came running, and shoving a revolver in our stomachs he ordered us back to the military barracks. The revolver shook as the guard shouted.

GABRIEL'S WINGS

It shook because the wings of the Archangel Gabriel were shadowing the palace of Carol, King of Rumania. The wings of that angelic warrior of the Hosts of Heaven were shadowing all Rumania. And the fantastic fact is that the shadow of the Archangel Gabriel's wings has something to do with the question of how the next war, if it comes, may turn out, for Germany or for France.

Twelve years ago an 18-year-old boy, son of a teacher of German in a secondary school in Moldavia, brooded deeply over the national reputation of Rumania. The quips that Rumania's enemies pass upon her cut him deeply. "Mania," he heard a scoffer say, "is a form of mental disease. Kleptomania is the form of mental disease that makes an individual a thief. But when you speak of kleptomania as applied to a whole nation, you call it Rumania."

The boy hated that kind of a joke. He hated the corruption that he saw on every side of him. He looked for a cure and presently he found it in the doctrine of Prof. Alexander Cuza's anti-Semitic party.

FANATICAL ASSASSIN

The boy joined in every anti-Jewish riot. Presently, when he was 20 years old the boy had his big chance. The police prefect of Jassy had sternly suppressed rioting students. The boy shot and killed the police prefect of Jassy. Unknown before, the boy's name now became a headline in the newspapers. It was Cornelius Zelea Codreanu.

Cordreanu was handsome. He had a flashing eye, a magnetic voice, and when he spoke there was a something of the quality of a torch-singer in his voice. He was a mystic, he inflamed his comrades. And when he was acquitted of the murder Codreanu became a hero of the Rumanian student world.

He went to Germany, studied a while in the University of Leipzig, sniffed the incense of the growing power of Hitlerism, and returned to his own country resolved to become the Hitler of Rumania. He was more romantic than Hitler. His name for his party was "The League of the Archangel Gabriel."

LIKE KU KLUX KLAN

Nights when all the villages were dark, Codreanu, now called "the capitano," would ride with his cohorts through the countryside. Their horses were draped in white, and on the shoulders of the night-riders plumed white wings were fixed. Like the Ku Klux Klan of the old South, the archangels would descend on a village, call out the shivering inhabitants, and by threats of unearthly violence extort a promise of good behaviour.

It was all just good clean fun and the authorities laughed at it until—in the elections of 1932 after Codreanu had changed the name of his party to the "Iron Guard," all the customary fixing of the polls by the government party failed to prevent the capitano's men from registering 71,702 votes, or nearly 2.62 per cent of the total.

Codreanu made another visit to Germany in the spring of 1933. His newspaper Calendarul thereafter blossomed out. By that time virtually the entire corps of university students was with him; students was with him; nearly all of the urban youth, and sons of the best families shocked their parents by announcing they had joined the Iron Guard. The statutes of the guard were, as one prominent Rumanian put it to me, "clearly worthy of the support of any decent citizen." They denounced corruption, lauded honesty, swore to

FRANCE ASSAILED

But most important for Europe, the Iron Guard declared that France was the real corruptor of the nation. It was humiliating that Rumania should submit to French influence. There was no mention of Germany, but the mere fact that the Iron Guard was anti-French was sufficient to identify the pro-German politics of the growing organization.

It grew too fast to suit the authorities. Neutral Rumanians estimate that if the guard had been allowed candidates in the 1933 elections they would have polled a good 300,000 or 10 per cent of the total. Just before the elections the new Prime Minister Duca, dissolved the Iron Guard. A fortnight later he was shot and killed by an Iron Guard student on a railroad station platform.

Capitano Codreanu fled. So did Hitler after his 1923 putsch in Munich. But Hitler came back, and the party that was laughed at so short a time ago is today the master of Germany and the bad dream of allied Europe. And because of the example set by Hitler, Rumania today is not laughing at Codreanu.

The astonishing thing is that the murder of Duca created, it is true, an initial reaction against the Iron Guard, but today Rumanians of high degree are saying: "It is a shame that Duca was killed. But, after all, that boy who killed him is the first Rumanian in two generations to risk his life for an ideal. And isn't it true that the state needs cleansing? Isn't it true that the nation needs a rebirth?"

RUMANIANS AGREED

From a score of Rumanians came the same opinion: "This is not the end, but the beginning of the Iron Guard." And this at a time when the police with a thousand or more Iron Guard prisoners, are using all the well-known methods of the Balkan third degree to break their spirits.

This is bad news for France. The head of the foreign department of a great French institution came to Bucharest to study the strength of the Iron Guard, of German influence in this important allied country. He went away deeply discouraged.

In the files of the Iron Guard prisoners, and from their own enforced confessions, the siguranza found a death list. It contained certainly the names of Foreign Minister Titulescu, of a series of the king's most intimate friends, and included that of Madame Magda Lupescu, for whom Carol gave up his kingdom once. The Iron Guard objected to Madame Lupescu because she is Jewish. They objected to Titulescu because he is a friend of France, a leading spirit in the Little Entente.

For the moment the bayonets of the palace guard have kept the archangel's wings from fluttering too near. Titulescu is back in the cabinet. Rumania is still a member of the Little Entente. But France is sceptical. Should war come in Europe, where would Rumania stand?

Lost 20 Lbs. of Fat In Just 4 Weeks

Mrs. Mae West of St. Louis, Mo., writes: "I'm only 28 yrs. old and weighed 170 lbs. until taking one box of your Kruschen Salts just 4 weeks ago. I now weigh 150 lbs. I also have more energy and furthermore I've never had a hungry moment."

Fat folks should take one-half teaspoonful of Kruschen Salts in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast—an 85 cent bottle lasts 4 weeks—you can get Kruschen at Sun Drug Company, Inc., or any drug store in America. If not joyfully satisfied after the first bottle—money back.

RELIEF BOARD TO HEAR LYNCH

Douglas P. Falconer, chief of the investigation into the affairs of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board, is to hear complaints against the board from Joseph R. Lynch, member of the Legislature, tomorrow morning.

Lynch, whose charges of waste in the distribution of relief by the county board resulted in the investigation, said today that he had been invited to air his complaints by Falconer at the Free Dispensary Building, Fernando street, headquarters for Falconer and his staff.

Lynch said today that his complaints would be confined to the awarding of coal contracts. He said that he would attempt to prove that the coal contracts did not always go to the lowest bidder. Falconer has mailed letters to several persons who have knowledge of the Allegheny County Emergency Relief Board to voice any complaints they may have or offer any suggestions.

Litigation over the Harrison Nesbit $755,655 insurance trust has been concluded by the United States Supreme Court's denial of a review of the Pennsylvania Supreme Court's decision, attorneys for both sides said today.

The remaining $267,878 is held by the Union National Bank of Pittsburgh for Mrs. Nesbit and her children, according to L. E. Hickman, who, with William Watson Smith, was attorney for the creditor banks.

LEAGUE COURT DRIVE LOOMS IN SENATE

By JOHN A. KENNEDY

WASHINGTON, March 7.—So great is the flood of propaganda seeking early ratification of the League of Nations Court that the Senate Foreign Relations Committee will soon hold hearings on the subject, it developed today.

International and pacifist organizations are swamping Senators with identically-worded pleas asking that the Senate interrupt its consideration of vital recovery legislation and engage in a long-drawn-out debate on whether the United States should enter the League of Nations through the League Court back door.

Senate internationalists planned to discuss the date for the proposed hearings at a meeting of the Foreign Relations Committee.

Senator Pittman (Dem.), of Nevada, chairman of the Foreign Relations Committee, told the Senate that in response to many inquiries "I have no doubt that such hearings will be had on some date during the present month."

Pittman later said he doubts the question can be disposed of by the Senate before adjournment. He also expressed doubt that two-thirds of the Senate membership favor entering the League Court as claimed by many of the propagandists who have been writing him.

At the same time, Pittman expressed an opinion that a majority of the Foreign Relations Committee opposes the pending reservations adopted by the foreign relations committee when it approved the court protocols two years ago.

Pittman promised that both pro-courters and anti-courters will be given ample opportunity to be heard.

NEW LEATHER 'SHINES SELF'

Experiments conducted on a new type leather at Mellon Institute show that shoes made of the leather can be polished by simply rubbing with a soft cloth.

In a competitive test with four other leathers results showed that the new type rated highest on the basis of resistance to abrasion and appearance after polishing. Laboratory tests have been supplemented by practical three-month wearing trial by a group of 32 persons. All 32, it is claimed, found that the leather "requires no dressing and that friction alone brings out the desired finish."

Ruling on Noise Bans Dances of Women's Club

CHARLESTON, W. Va., March 7.—(AP.)—A ruling that "noise alone may create a nuisance, depending on time, locality and degree," was handed down by the Supreme Court yesterday.

The court's ruling was given in affirming a decision of the Kanawha County Circuit Court halting dances at the Charleston Women's Club after 9 o'clock at night.

The club house is located in the residential section near the state capitol. Persons living nearby sought to halt the dances upon grounds they constituted a nuisance.

STORM DELAYS INSULL PLEA

ATHENS, Greece, March 7.—(AP.)—When Samuel Insull, Sr., wanted in Chicago for embezzlement, asked clemency yesterday from the government order which would force him to quit Greece by tomorrow, it was storming.

The rain and sleet, said his friends, made any thought of the trip by the ageing man dangerous to his helath.

But today dawned clear and sunny. The brightness of the day, however, threw no light upon what action the government might take upon his plea to be permitted to stay, immune from warrants which United States authorities hold.

GIMBELS TELLS THE truth

Ordinarily a well-run store would be panic-stricken at the condition Gimbels faces today. We own an extra million dollars' worth of goods! But these aren't ordinary times. That $1,024,812 (to be exact) worth of merchandise was planned for months ago. Let's look at the "stock sheets" a moment:

There are those two carloads of rug pads bought early last Fall when the price continued to mount. There are over 24,000 sheets which we got in the nick of time before prices soared. On down the lists, the story is the same, with every possible item marked at last year's low prices.

We've done everything in our power, Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Johnson, to keep prices down as you wished. That's why, Mrs. Housewife, you'll find your Spring clothes and the children's, and all the things you need for your home, at such savings here at Gimbels. This Spring Refurnishing time is just what we planned for when we bought that extra million dollars' worth of merchandise months ago.

GIMBELS TELLS THE TRUTH

DR. WYNEKOOP FIGHTS PEN SENTENCE

sat in her wheelchair without sign of a quiver. She turned to two of her children, Walker and Dr. Catherine Wynekoop, and said:

"Go home now, children, and sleep. Your mother is not guilty. No, no. Not guilty."

In a moment it was over and this paradox of a woman, with a keen, strong mind in a frail body, was being wheeled from the courtroom, back to the infirmary cot at the county jail. There she will await the result of her attorneys' efforts to win a new trial.

Arguments for a new trial have been set for March 24. If they are denied, an appeal to the State Supreme Court is planned.

The verdict was regarded by many as tantamount to a death penalty for Dr. Wynekoop, who had collapsed time and time again during the 14-day ordeal of this—her second trial. She suffered a complete collapse from heart disease during her first hearing last January. There was a likelihood, some physicians said, that she would die of natural causes before she goes to prison—if she goes.

TWO BALLOTS TAKEN

The first of the two ballots taken by the jury last night was reported to have been 11 to 1 for conviction. Two jurors were reported to have voted on the first ballot for the extreme penalty—death in the electric chair—which Prosecutor Charles S. Dougherty indirectly demanded in his closing argument. He said:

"I ask you to do unto this defendant as she did unto Rheta Wynekoop."

Several hundred "murder fans" heard the verdict. The courtroom was jammed almost to the point of suffocation when the jurors, tapping on the door of their room at 7:50 p. m. last night, announced they had arrived at their decision. There was a 35-minute delay, due to the fact that Dr. Wynekoop's attorneys, Milton and W. W. Smith and Frank Tyrrell, were not yet in the courtroom.

When the verdict was read by Foreman Fred Oviatt there was a murmur of apparent protest from some of the spectators.

Walker Wynekoop called the verdict a "dirty stab," adding that he was getting a $5,000 loan on some property to finance an appeal. Dr. Catherine said it was "an outrage." Burdine Gardner, of Indianapolis, father of Rheta, apparently was completely satisfied. He said:

"Twenty-five years. Justice has been served."

SCORES DEFENSE

In his closing argument Prosecutor Dougherty claimed that Dr. Wynekoop had convicted herself by permitting her attorneys to try to pin the killing on Earle, the widower of Rheta. Dougherty shouted:

"This woman who professed to love both Earle and Rheta so fondly, sat here complacently while her attorneys first tried to insinuate that she had shouldered responsibility to save her son, and was equally complacent when they suggested the fantastic notion that Rheta administered chloroform to herself, shot herself in the back and covered her body with a blanket before she died."

Summing up for Dr. Alice, her attorney, W. W. Smith, pounded the counsel table, snapped the pistol that killed Rheta, gulped some 10 tumblers of water, and denounced the state's case as nothing less than a "dastardly double-crossing outrage."

JEERED FOR WEEPING

Meanwhile, Prosecutor Dougherty yawned. Smith spoke of mother love, and whipped out a handkerchief to apply it to the corners of his eyes. A skeptic in the audience exclaimed:

"Hotcha!"

Undaunted, the attorney went on. He snatched up the double indemnity insurance policies which the state had shown were taken out on Rheta's life a month before she died, and named four insurance agents who had testified. He shouted:

"Not one of those agents but told you of Dr. Alice's statement that she wanted the insurance so that she would ease the mind of that poor, unfortunate child, Rheta, obsessed with the fear of tuberculosis."

He shook the policies in the faces of the jury.

It was to collect the insurance to bolster a precarious financial position, and to free Earle from an unhappy married life with Rheta that Dr. Wynekoop put the girl to death, the state contended.

Child's Head Hurt When Hit by Auto

Chapel's Stone Laid Without Documents

Without ceremony, the cornerstone of the Heinz Memorial Chapel of the University of Pittsburgh has been set in the regular course of the work, the Pitt News reports.

Original plans to set the stone with Chancellor John G. Bowman and other notables present were blocked by bad weather. When lack of the stone delayed construction, workmen sealed it into place without stuffing it full of documents, the News says.

ZONE CAB SHUNS P. S. C. HEARING

The Zone Cab Corporation of Cleveland was scored today by Public Service Commissioner Herman J. Goldberg when officials of the company failed to attend an adjourned hearing on their application for a per mit to operate cheap cabs here.

Goldberg said he had received a letter Monday from the legal representative of the company stating they would appear or offer further evidence on the application. The letter said the company would rest its case on the evidence already presented.

When the Commissioner called the hearing and learned only a local attorney, acting as "observer" for the the Zone company, was present, he said:

This is the first time in 21 years of the Public Service Commission's existence that an applicant in a case which was protested has determined not to participate furthtr and has asked for the granting of a certificate of public convenience in this manner.

C. K. Robinson, counsel for the Yellow Cab Company and the Pittsburgh Transportation Company, immediately urged Goldberg to dismiss the Zone company's application. He urged they had failed to make a case or show any necessity for more cabs here. At the request of Assistant City Solicitor John Kennedy, action on his motion was deferred two weeks to give the city an opportunity to decide whether or not it wants to step into the case.

ROOSEVELT'S TARIFF PLAN DEBATED

NEW YORK, March 7.—Sharp criticism, offset by equally strong support of President Roosevelt's proposed tariff program, featured yesterday's hearing of the commission of inquiry on national policy in international economic relations.

The commission, named by the Social Science Research Council and financed by the Rockefeller Foundation, held hearings for a second time at the Bar Association Building.

Matthew Woll, vice president of the American Federaton of Labor, declared the President's tariff policy meant scrapping the National Recovery Act.

Woll declared industrial workers would be forced, if the policy of trade agreements was adopted, to compete on an almost equal footing with the low-wage workers of Europe and Asia. He added:

"If the President is given the power for which he asks, the country will be hastening a time when power to be exercised by the President will be greater than the power of former kings, czars and emperors."

Curt G. Pfeiffer, vice president of the National Council of American Importers and Traders, however, declared the present tariff structure was not based on a sound economic policy.

Others heard by the commission were John F. Zellers, vice president of Remington Rand Company; E. P. Thomas, president of the National Foreign Trade Council, and Harry Tipper, executive vice president of the American Manufacturers' Export Association.

Zellers advocated breaking down all barriers that interfere with the free flow of trade.

Success of the NRA, declared Thomas in reply to Woll, is based on the recovery of foreign markets. Thomas said:

"Foreign markets can be restored by bilateral trade agreements. To accomplish this is the most pressing problem for the country."

Tipper urged an increase in imports which would give to countries favored by our trade the power to increase their exports from us.

PRESS SCORES IN CONTEMPT

PIERRE, S. D., March 7.—(AP.)—the right of appeal by newspapers convicted of criminal contempt was upheld today by the South Dakota Supreme Court when it consented to review a Circuit Court judgment against the Aberdeen American-News.

The high court denied a petition of the Brown County Bar Association, which sought dismissal of the newspaper's appeal on the ground there is no statutory authority in this state for review of contempt judgments.

In unanimous opinion, the Supreme Court said the right of appeal in contempt proceedings, although denied under common law, is now generally recognized.

The decision permits the paper and the bar group to present merits of the case, which arose from editorial criticism of Circuit Judge Howard Babcock's handling of forgery sentence. Circuit Judge J. H. Bottum fined the paper and its editor and publisher $200 each.

J. A. Mathews and Howard Anderson, publisher and editor, respectively, also were given 30-day jail sentences, which were suspended upon condition they refrain from further comment on the case.

H. O. Hepperle, one of the paper's attorneys, told the court this amounted to censorship.

Since the action, Mathews died and Anderson became publisher.

The right of appeal has been recognized in South Dakota for 40 years, but the bar association sought reversal of this policy.

Whitlock Suffers Shingles Attack

CANNES, France, March 7.—(AP.)—A doctors' bulletin tonight said Brand Whitlock, former American ambassador to Belgium, was "progressing satisfactorily" from an attack of shingles.

BUT THE POWER TO LOWER TARIFF RATES FIFTY PER CENT IS THE POWER TO DESTROY AMERICAN INDUSTRY!

It is the power to cripple the ninety-five per cent of production and employment which supplies domestic markets in order to favor the five per cent which competes in foreign markets.

SUCH a policy is not only allowing the tail to wag the dog; it is destroying the dog to save the tail.

And the tail would be utterly valueless without the dog, not only in the simile but in the actuality.

There is another reason—although no other reason is needed for not giving the President power to make these bargains with foreign nations—and that reason is that the bargains will not be scrupulously carried out by foreign nations, most of which are unreliable in their dealings with America, and some of which are definitely dishonest.

The American government is an utter innocent in the diplomatic field, and the foreign nations know it.

They borrow money from us and do not pay it. They make agreements and do not keep them.

To use the popular phrase, they are sharpers and we are hicks. We play their shell game and they make fools of us.

We buy their green goods and they laugh at us. We lose our money, and they take it and spend it to compete with us.

WE LABOR under a load of taxation inherited from THEIR war, and they show their appreciation by piling THEIR taxation upon us on top of OUR OWN.

They have not even the gratitude which a sharper would show towards the simpletons who support him.

If we open our home markets to their goods, on their worthless pledges, we will find that we have sacrificed American industry and American labor for a bond that is without value, and a word that is without honor.

Take Mr. Roosevelt's historic apple swap, an example of ingenuous innocence which has never been matched in the whole history of our fatuous foreign relations.

Under this arrangement the United States permits the entry of some ten millions of dollars worth of French wines and France agrees to allow the importation of some one million dollars worth of American apples.

For some reason or other even this one-sided agreement has not operated reciprocally, various shipments of American apples having been left to rot on the French docks or seek a market elsewhere.

We confidently leaned again on the broken reed of French sincerity and honest intent, and experienced the usual consequences.

WHAT reason have we to believe or to hope that other bargains would be more scrupulously kept, or that the United States can ever depend on the pledges of nations which repudiate their debts and dishonor their agreements?

The reaction of Congress to this startling proposal of the President's will be watched by thoughtful Americans with profound concern.

Perhaps it is with the issue here presented, that REAL RECOVERY in the United States will begin—THE RECOVERY OF ITSELF AND ITS SELF RESPECT—THE RECOVERY OF ITS CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS, ITS INDEPENDENCE AND ITS LIBERTY.

GLOBE TROTTING

Hello, Ladies and Gentlemen:

Golly! I hope what James F. had to say isn't true. He heard the broadcast asking for the return of some lost saxophone music.

James said that such a broadcast was not in the interest of society in general. Saxophones are his pet phobia.

Bill Hedges Turns Scribe For a Day

By WILLIAM S. HEDGES
General Manager, KDKA

Note: At Aircaster's request, Col. Hedges takes over today's radio column, on his twelfth radio anniversary.

"Gosh, isn't it wonderful to think of being able to pick up music and voices from the air, using only this little crystal, a coil and a pair of earphones? Yes sir, the world is certainly progressing."

"Don't be silly, it is just a toy. What use is it?"

"It can be of a lot of use. Just think, if everyone in the United States had a pair of headphones and a receiving set, the President could talk to them."

"You make me laugh. It can't be done. You can't even pick up a station a hundred miles away. Radio is just a fad. It won't last. Why don't you take up something useful like knitting, if you must waste a little time?"

That was the state of radio in the spring of 1922 when I was somewhat reluctantly tossed into radio. There was no more enthusiasm felt for the job of head of the radio department of a Chicago daily paper than if I had been made head of the mah jong department.

ORDERS IS ORDERS

However, orders were orders and since it did not interfere with my regular reportorial duties, the task was undertaken.

I did not feel that my limited aquaintance with wireless through having pounded a key in the air service qualified me for the position; nevertheless there was a job to be done, so an investigation of this strange mystery which was causing so much comment in the east, was launched.

A daily radio column, by some miracle, appeared. On Saturday's there was a tabloid section to struggle with. The principle objective was to provide encouragement for those who found radio a marvelous thing, although it sometimes took a half hour to find a hot spot on the crystal.

Technical questions had to be answered, because the radio fan of those days built his own set. There was little of note upon which to comment so far as programs were concerned.

Notwithstanding this condition the interest and enthusiasm of the radio fans continued unabated. There was a constant clamor for new circuit designs. These were provided by the dozen, in spite of the penurious suggestion of the business manager that we standardize on 10 circuits in order to hold down the cost of making cuts.

The rapid developments that took place in the first few months in my experience with radio compelled me to give up the well-loved job of reporting.

Never again was I to experience the thrill of seeing my name at the top of a story carrying the eight-column top line on the first page. By that time radio had swamped me. It absorbed my entire interest.

The radio department of the newspaper became an exacting taskmaster, with the advent of radio tubes, which opened vast new fields for experimentation for the radio fans.

Circuits of new tube receivers crowded the old crystal set designs out of the columns. Photographs of receivers covered with a multitude of knobs, dials and gadgets were published.

With the advance of years programming increased in importance. The radio audience was beginning to become discriminating in its taste.

The average radio listener is aware of the advances that have been made during those years, with improvements in transmitters; the growth of a radio manufacturing industry that touched a peak of $2,000,000,000 in 1929; improvement in studio program technique and the increase of the radio audience to more than 60,000,000 people.

It is needless to go into detail here, since these are merely the recollections of the early years in radio by an "old timer" who is today celebrating his twelfth anniversary in radio.

Local Highlights On WJAS Tonight

Sweets Predominate In List of Prize Recipes

Variety of Desserts Suggested to Housewives

Glancing over Prudence Penny's prize selections for the day, it would seem desserts excelled in the recipes received. Not that it isn't a fine thing occasionally. We all like to touch up our meals with a little bit of sweetness, and aids, especially such simple and excellent ones as are found in today's list, are often life-savers to the weary housewife.

You may not know what to serve, but Prudence Penny does. She has the answer for you, easily available through reference to the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. In her current list, for instance, you'll find any variety of desserts ideally suited to the usual family meal. And after all you cook for your family every day, for company only once in a great while.

Let others than your family appreciate your skill in cooking by sending your recipes to Prudence Penny at the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph. For every recipe she uses, she will pay you either $5 (first prize) or $1. No recipes are returned.

Helen Watts Schreiber, nationally known cooking expert and lecturer, will present and demonstrate an array of new menu hints and kitchen helps at the Kroger Food Foundation Cooking School next week.

Have you ever seen talking marionettes in the movies? Have you ever been to a cooking school where you could sit in the last row and still see and hear everything that took place on the stage? Well, these are just two of the many outstanding features of the Kroger Food Foundation Cooking School being held next week at the Soldiers' and Sailors' Memorial Hall. Three new talking films especially made for the big 1934 Kroger Cooking School will be shown, and no matter where you sit you will be able to see and hear everything that takes place on the stage because this school is amazingly different from all other cooking schools, and it is absolutely free.

Helen Watts Schreiber, nationally known cooking expert and lecturer, will demonstrate fascinating new menu hints and helps right in her own kitchen set up on the stage.

And someone who comes is going to have a new handsome Westinghouse Electric Refrigerator in her home. And just because she spent three exciting, fascinating afternoons at the Kroger Food Foundation Cooking School. Yes . . . it may be you.

Remember . . . everything is free . . . the program starts promptly at 2 P. M. on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday of next week, so reserve those afternoons right now.

Slender Lines for the Heavier Figure

Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph 15c Practical Pattern

Of course you want a slender-looking dress if you have a somewhat heavy figure. The up-and-down points of the hip line are wisely planned for this, as is the deep V-neck with its delicate touch of lace. This dress is delightful in one of the bright silk or sheer or cotton prints that are enlivening the season. Polka dots or colorful circlets on a dark ground are a nice design too, as the picture shows. The belt may be of the material of the dress, or it may be of a contrasting or harmonizing color. You'll like yourself in this dress.

Pattern 1779 is available in sizes 36, 38, 40, 42, 44 and 46. Size 36 takes 3¾ yards 39-inch fabric and ¾ yard 2½-inch lace. Illustrated step-by-step sewing instructions included.

Through the Spyglass @ VIEWING THE NEW

You little shoppers who want to learn the names of the shops whose items are listed in this column day by day . . . call GRANT 6500 . . . and ASK FOR THE SPYGLASS. Or send in a stamped self-addressed envelope for your reply. THE SPYGLASS is always on the alert, peering out new "finds" . . . and you will be answered promptly!

"Out of the frying pan into the fire" doesn't even daunt the new ovenware which we have gazed thoughtfully upon lately! For while it doesn't spend any time in the frying pan, per se, it certainly can "face it" when it comes to baking and such.

And what ware it is! Creamy soft with a wonderful new finish (a sort of dull finish which is so smart looking) and wearing hectic spots on it . . . polka dots of orange. And there are casseroles both family sizes and individual . . . mixing bowls . . . Tom and Jerry sets with mugs to match . . . custard cups . . . drip coffee pots . . . and so on and so on 15c to $3.95. And may we mention one special delight—the four-piece set for sugar, pepper, flour and salt, matching all the other pieces, and specially swellish to set on the back of the oven where it's handy! (with handles, incidentally!).

Too . . . for it's not like us to leave a stick or stem unturned when we begin rooting 'round you know . . . there is another set of ovenware . . . much like this first one. Except that this baby is all red and green with plaids . . . and is a two-timer into the bargain. The deal being that you can cook in a covered dish, for example . . . then take off the cover, turn it upside down, and use it for a serving dish. Quite a novel idea . . . saving, as it does, both time, money, and space in your cupboards!

Gentlemen may prefer the blondes . . . but we'll "betcha nickel" that YOU will like the new blue or gray shoes we've found just as well. And seeing as how it's little you who has to wear them . . . well, that's just that!

Because . . . for $2.49 a pair we know of nowhere where shoes grow more charmingly! Blues . . . blondes . . . grays—in opera, strap tie, and sandal styles! And after sniffing at the Spring breeze which has been playing about the last few days, our thoughts have lightly turned to new outfits, and this means shoes as well. How about you?

We hereby knight you into the order of the garter . . . the new garter which is so what-every-woman-wants when it comes to leaving dress contours smooth and un-bumpy! No more nobs and the old-fashioned "hook and eye" effects like the garters on most girdies. These newcomers flip over your hose . . . or rather your hose flip over them . . . and there you are with nary a bump. 25c the pair. In peach and white . . . and two sizes . . . for the wide or narrow elastic.

NATION'S STORY IN 600 WORDS AIM OF MANY

By KENNETH M. ELLIS

American is today turning its eyes to the colossal head of George Washington, emerging, under the genius of Gutzon Borglum, from Mount Rushmore, in Dakota's Black Hills.

Great writers, great poets, farmers, school children, students, civic leaders, newspaper men and women, all are thinking:

"How shall I tell the story of America, in 600 words, so that thousands of years from now people will read it and understand what we fought for—and desire, then, to carry on our great ideals?"

That looks like a very difficult matter. But remember that a grocery clerk from Illinois wrote one of the greatest of human utterances, on the back of an old envelope, on a roughly jogging railway train and a few hours later electrified the world by reading it to a handful of people at Gettysburg. That simple, brief statement embodied our greatest ideals in a very few words. A very few SIMPLE words. It was Lincoln's Gettysburg address.

INSCRIPTION SOUGHT

The Sun-Telegraph and associatted Hearst papers are endeavoring to secure the best possible text for the use of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission in determining what shall be the final inscription carved in the living granite of the Black Hills by the sculptor who is now creating the 450-foot figures of Washington, Lincoln, Jefferson and Theodore Roosevelt as the nation's permanent message to posterity.

Every day you will find in this paper information as to how to enter the competition—what prizes are being offered—or the latest news of the development of this nationwide campaign.

The process of organizing national and local committees from coast to coast and border to border is being pushed at fever heat. Great educators, writers and historians as well as persons who are noted for their patriotism are being enlisted as judges of your submitted texts.

From the time to time the Sun-Telegraph will publish special articles on the nine major episodes which relate to the formation of our country as it stands today.

OPPORTUNITY TO ALL

Everybody in the United States and its posessions has an equal opportunity to influence that final inscription. It may be that a grade school student will produce the masterpiece.

Some of the greatest works of art the world has preserved through the ages were the product of youths from 14 to 18. Shelly was only 18 when he wrote Queen Mab. Cellini was a boy when his first silver and goldsmithing won him first place among the world's great artists. Many masterpieces of painting were the work of very young persons.

But of course the nation's wisest and greatest poets and prose writers are thinking how they, too, would express our national aims in those 600 words. They are getting themselves pretty well steamed up, too.

The poets—now that they've thought the matter over—believe that inscription ought to be in verse. The prose writers—some of them—disagree. Out of the controversy may come that "I'LL SHOW YOU!" spirit that is always inspirational.

Inscription Plan Lauded By Former Governor

By L. B. HANNA

Former Governor of North Dakota
Member of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission

Nothing could be better calculated to fire the imagination of the American people, to inspire them to deep appreciation of their heritage of liberty than the competition being sponsored by the Hearst newspapers to aid this commission in selecting a final inscription for the Mount Rushmore Memorial.

I believe the commission, by securing this composite expression from great artists and writers and sincere citizens, will be able to select a message to the world that will live and be carried forward for centuries to come.

4 More Judges Named For Mt. Rushmore Texts

West Virginia and the awarding the cash and scholarships prizes. The other committee members include Dr. Thomas S. Baker, president of Carnegie Institute of Technology; the Very Rev. J. J. Callahan, president, Duquesne University; Dr. Ben G. Graham, superintendent Pittsburgh public schools; Dr. Charles E. Dickey, superintendent, Allegheny County Schools; former Judge Robert M. Ewing, president, Historical Society of Western Pennsylvania; and Capt. J. Clark Mansfield, president, Pittsburgh chapter, Sons of American Revolution.

The committee's selection will be submitted to the Mt. Rushmore National Commission. Like entries from throughout the country, gathered by the Hearst newspapers, will be used to procure the best possible text to form the huge inscription high on Mt. Rushmore in the Black Hills of South Dakota.

Men, women and children are studying the nine epochal points in the country's history. Students are submitting their 600-word entries to the committee named in their respective schools. Non-school attendants submit their entries to the Pittsburgh Memorial Committee, in care of the Sun-Telegraph.

Realizing that his efforts in serving on the committtee serves an important part in the completion of the national memorial, Mr. Aaron telegraphed from Phoenix, Ariz.

"I will be glad to serve."

Dr. Bowman, one of Pittsburgh's first leaders to laud the Hearst newspapers' countrywide quest, said:

"To let the men and women in the United States write the episodes in our national life should be accepted with seriousness and great feeling."

AIDE THRILLED BY CONTEST

By LORINE JONES SPOONTS

Member Mt. Rushmore National Memorial Commission.
Written for the Hearst Newspapers.

NEW YORK, March 7.—As a member of the Mount Rushmore National Memorial Commission, I am thrilled at the effort now being made by the Hearst newspapers to assist us in securing from all America a text suitable for inscription on the entabulature of the memorial.

Since the earliest dawn of social consciousness, mankind has sought to preserve and perpetuate in imperishable stone the images of his national heroes as emblematic of his ideals, his achievements and his hopes.

There now nears completion a new national monument dedicated to the stronger heroes of a stronger race—a grander and more heroic effort than any which has gone before—finite mankind's supreme gesture toward the infinite.

Homewood Woman Hit By Automobile

Mrs. J. E. Sweeney, 51, of 1409 Homewood avenue, suffered bruises when she was struck by an automobile driven, police said, by Oriente Rossi, 23, of 7128 Upland street, at Homewood avenue and Hermitage street, late yesterday.

She was taken to Pittsburgh Hospital.

SPEAK UP, SISTERS!

Glances Into the Realms of Domesticity and Romance

By MARION BRUNOT

Scorned Women Will Tell All to Clear Themselves

You CAN'T KEEP A WOMAN STILL if she has SOMETHING TO SAY.

That is what a lumber king found out when he thought he had paid his wife over a million dollars to do the silent act. But no sooner were the papers signed than she turned on him and let her tongue loose.

Nothing is more dangerous for a man than a woman scorned. A poet said that a long time ago, and evidently he knew.

She can hold her spite indefinitely, but the time always comes when she will have her say. Justice waylaid, but not downed; that is what she has been thinking.

Money cannot buy any woman's silence when that silence leaves her uncomfortable. She will want her security. But more still, she will want to clear herself.

UNHAPPY ENDING

And if the clearing of herself brings with it trouble for the person whom she considers the culprit, then it is just too bad.

It is a shame to take a woman's best years, and play ball with them. It is an outrage to allow a woman to waste her affection on an empty heart. Suddenly, after years of service, to have a man leave you because he has found a fairer or a younger face, isn't a happy dream ending. So thought this lumberman's wife.

It isn't in any woman's heart, especially if she still has a hankering after the man in question, to remain peaceable. It isn't written anywhere that she is expected to be.

Men will agree with me that women are the sweetest creatures in the whole world. But the trouble lies in that plural word, women. None of them speak of her in the single form.

Ever since the world began, man has been a complex creature. A privileged human being has he been ever since old Adam looked contrite, and spoke up that it was Eve who was to blame. A man can clear his conscience sufficiently to take one woman to the altar at a time, and he can say the "love, honor, and cherish" as if he meant it.

But the truth is he never reckons on how long he may live.

NEW INTERESTS

When a man amasses great wealth, he lays many things aside. He lays aside the cottage, and takes unto himself a mansion. He lays aside the less successful chum, and begins going around with his new kind. He lays aside the one everyday suit, and has a supply of all sorts of clothing hanging in his cupboards. And for the life of him, he can't always see why he has to stick to the old weather beaten wife.

Why she shouldn't be willing to let him change to another and fairer woman, one more suitable to him in his new position, he can't comprehend.

That is just where the old wife has a tale to tell. When she was in her faded gingham dresses hanging out his shirts on the rear yard clothes line, when she was scrubbing and mending for him, there were many little criticisms of him crept in upon her. But she kept them to herself. She didn't even mention them to the neighbors. He was all hers, and she considered loyalty was silence.

But when he begins stepping out, and looking around, and when the other woman gets an inning, everything takes on different proportions. She has learned a few things that he might not like to hear. And quite likely she may find a number of confidantes who will be too glad to listen in.

So she wags her tongue. No matter if she has been paid a million for what her husband deems was a promise to keep still.

MODERN REALIZATION

A queer slant of mind, you think. But it is one many sisters have. We can't change their ideas, either.

The rich lumberman's wife was a small woman, and she wore drab clothes and her hats had a way of not being very fashionable. But there was one thing modern she had, and that was a modern slant on what was looked upon as news.

And did she use it!

Where was her honor, you ask? Maybe that wore out, along with many other things when she was laboring at the side of her lumberman. Yet I am not sure she had the least idea what the money was for. She looked upon it as her share of what the husband and she had earned while together. She even may have been flagrant enough to think she had earned it.

A woman's years. Are they worth nothing? A woman's faith. Has that no price? A woman's troth out under the stars and when walking looked good to the lumberman. Had that no weight?

But what do you think, reader? Do you think the lumberman has a grievance? Or are you, tooth and nail, with the little drab wife?

I'LL TREASURE THIS PICTURE FOREVER—AND EVER
FAY-KING

By FAY KING

Romantic youth has always attached itself to some remote ideal.

In that is sustained the success of popular favorites. Without that romantic interest there could be no stars of the stage or screen.

Many a sedate matron who ridicules as "utterly absurd" such devotion in the youth around her, has forgotten how she, too, once secretly adored the handsome idol of her day.

Many a successful business man, now all dignity and importance, will roughishly confess how, when a youth, he worshiped from afar some leading actress of his day.

Do not belittle these harmless "crushes." Distance always lends enchantment, and it is quite the safest "love affair" your romantic youngster can have in the foolish years.

They outgrow it—like rompers.

Given in Marriage

A Sequel to Heart of a Wife

By ADELE GARRISON

There was a sudden cessation of chatter in the group around the cars as Hugh Grantland asked Edith Fairfax if she would share his runabout for the moonlight drive to the ocean, which she had proposed. It was so unheard of a thing for Hugh to single out any woman for attention, that his little speech appeared to strike everybody dumb.

Of us all, I think Edith herself was the most astonished and—I guessed—dismayed. I knew, as well as almost everybody in the group, that she had proposed the moonlight drive to the ocean in the hope that she could maneuver Dicky into taking her in his car "built only for two."

This unexpected query of Hugh's had deflated her promptly and thoroughly. If she had been a woman eaten up with inordinate vanity, as is Avis Arlen, she would have been so elated over deflecting from me even so small a part of the attention which Hugh unobtrusively but steadily has given me for years, that she would have forgotten her wish to annex Dicky, in a feeling of triumph over me.

But Edith Fairfax is not a vain woman. Indeed, she is innately one of the finest women I know. Yet she had had the misfortune to fall violently in love with Dicky even before I married him, in the days when she and her sister Lelia were struggling futilely to establish themselves as artists in New York, and her hopeless infatuation for him has warped—I almost wrote "wrecked" — her whole life.

I heard a slight, sibilant intake of Edith's breath, and knew that she was as exasperated as she was astonished. It was not even a sop to the little vanity she possesses, less than that of most women, for I know she was keen enough to read between the lines of Hugh's words and see exactly what he was trying to do.

It was something I, myself, had seen instantly, although I savagely scored myself for the vanity that prompted the thought. But in Dicky's sardonic eyes fixed on my face—I did not dare look at him directly, but from underneath my lashes I saw his expression—and in the illy-suppressed grin curving Harry Underwood's lips, I read the same conclusion. This was that Hugh had asked Edith to go with him not from any desire for her company, but on my account; to spare me the pain, as he thought, of seeing her go off alone with my husband.

I was not surprised to hear Dicky intervene.

"Sorry to cut in, old man," Dicky said airily, "but by my halidome, the lady is pledged to me, varlet though I be, for this moonlit trip to the ocean. She hasn't had a chance at one for a long time, and I've been promising her the treat for ages."

"'Treat,' I suppose, being spelled 'the Dicky-bird,' in your modest estimation," Harry Underwood drawled.

"Exactly," Dicky retorted, with a burlesqued cockiness. "Ain't it so, Ede?"

I waited breathlessly for Edith's answer.

Her answer was not long in coming.

"I am so stupid,' she said, contritely. "Sorry, Hugh, but I had completely forgotten that I had promised Dicky this drive. I know that can't be very soothing to your vanity, Dicky-bird, but it happens to be the truth. I do hope you'll ask me another time, Hugh?"

"Consider yourself promised to me for the next moonlight beach party," Hugh said gallantly, and under cover of his words Lee Chow, who had been eyeing him closely, moved nearer to me.

"I have changed my mind," he said. "I do not wish to talk tonight. Perhaps, I, too, shall go to the beach. But, if Hugh asks you--go!"

Contract Bridge

How to Play
How to Win

By Josephine Culbertson

A Large Set

Although the Approach-Forcing System permits the responding hand to keep partner's one-bid open with less honor strength than used to be the case three years ago, it is still bad policy to consider partner's one-bids as being practically Forcing. A minimum of one-plus honor-tricks or 2½ playing-tricks in partner's suit is always needed to make any response, particularly when the hand has no biddable suit. The pitfalls that may be encountered by automatically responding to partner's Opening bid with a worthless hand can easily be seen by looking at the hand below, even though it is granted that the Opening bidder himself subsequently made a bad Raise.

East, Dealer.
Both sides vulnerable.

	♠ K J 7 6 3 2 ♡ K Q 7 5 ◇ 8 ♣ 8 7
♠ Q 9 ♡ J 10 9 6 ◇ 9 4 3 2 ♣ J 10 4	North West East South	♠ A 10 8 ♡ 8 4 ◇ K Q 10 7 5 ♣ K Q 2
	♠ 5 4 ♡ A 3 2 ◇ A J 6 ♣ A 9 6 5 3

The bidding:

East	South	West	North
1 ◇	Pass (1)	1 N T (2)	2 ♠ (3)
2 N T (4)	Double (5)	Pass (6)	Pass
Pass

1—South has not a sound vulnerable Overcall, despite his three Aces.

2—A very bad notrump response. If West feels he must bid, he should bid two diamonds as the hand does have some playing strength in support of that suit. But even this latter call is inadvisable.

3—Fairly light for a vulnerable Overcall at the level of two-odd.

4—Probably as bad a bid as West's one-notrump response. Despite the fact that East has 3½ honor-tricks, he should not consider raising partner's notrump response, which, although it should not be as weak as it actually was, cannot be very strong. If East feels he must rebid, a Penalty Double of two spades would be far better, although it is apparent that North and South could easily have fulfilled a two-spade contract.

5—With two almost certain diamond stoppers, two outside Aces and a vulnerable bid from his partner, South quite correctly does not even consider passing with the vague hope that the opponents will get to three. He knows for a certainty that two notrump will be substantially defeated.

6—West has a second chance to save the situation, to some extent at least. He should unquestionably run to three diamonds. Why he did not, I do not know.

In the play of the hand, North opened a spade, and the Declarer won the trick with the nine in his own hand. An attempt was now made to set up the diamond suit, but since South had that suit stopped twice, North and South were able to take four spade tricks, two diamond tricks, three heart tricks and a club trick, thereby defeating the contract 2,000 points. And, against a diamond Opening, due to the inexorable workings of the time factor, North and South could not have made a game had they played three notrump themselves, although four spades might conceivably have been made.

Tomorrow's Hand

Assuming that North and South reach a final notrump contract rather than a final club contract, how can seven-odd be made on the hand below?

South, Dealer.
North and South vulnerable.

	♠ 9 7 4 ♡ 9 7 ◇ Q 10 4 ♣ K Q 8 4 3
♠ Q J 10 6 3 ♡ Q 8 6 ◇ 9 3 2 ♣ 9 5	North West East South	♠ 8 5 2 ♡ 10 5 4 3 ◇ J 7 6 5 ♣ J 7
	♠ A K ♡ A K J 2 ◇ A K 8 ♣ A 10 6 2

The hand will be discussed in tomorrow's article.

PACKING THE SATURDAY-TO-MONDAY BAGS FOR MILADY

By PRUNELLA WOOD

IN A FORTNIGHT or so all the girls will be getting home from their places in the tropic sun, and the next month will find most of them contenting themselves with week-ends here and there as far as traveling goes.

Lots of the clothes that come back with them will do very nicely for this in-between time, but a few new ones will not be amiss. The matter of something to wear on a train or in a motor is one important item, dressing gowns and negligees are another worth pondering, and it wouldn't be a daughter of Eve who turned down a chance to splurge on some new evening duds.

WITH THE EXCEPTION of these evening gowns, however, the trick in buying clothes for week-ending is to find those that will be useful in both the city and the country. Colorful tweeds, or lightish ones that can be worn with very giddy jumpers, neckerchiefs and berets on location are a good week-end costume as a silk shirt and city hat will get it there and get it back.

Or one may wear a simple dressmaker frock beneath a town top coat, and pack a cloth skirt, a light leather jacket and a jumper for hiking or other country sports. The traveling frock will do very nicely for any church-going on the visit—and experience teaches with unknown hostesses that often as not there is a church-going planned.

FOR EVENING SOME houses are run so that an informal toilette for Sunday night is as necessary as a very formal one for a gay Saturday night. Other houses expect their inmates to wear nothing but active sports clothes by day, and to dazzle by night. There are few, fortunately for the fun of things, where a frequent change of costumes is not part of the visit. Good looking underwear and lounging clothes (for the maid's sake, if for no other reason); something for sports and something for church or tea, if your hostess goes formal; and something for evening covers the luggage adequately.

Starched marquisette flowered with white and yellow, makes this dancing frock. It is worn over a bright yellow satin slip. The front neckline is cut low in the latest way.

Correct Manners

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Dinner at Eight?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A says the day's meals are named or called as follows: Breakfast, luncheon and supper. B says they are breakfast, luncheon and dinner.

We are everyday working people, but we would like to learn as we go along. A thinks when you have your breakfast, your luncheon at noon, and your supper at 6 or seven o'clock in the evening, it should be called supper, as this is the last meal. If you should have another meal after that, then the six or seven o'clock meal would be called dinner and the last meal supper. But why do most people call it dinner when it is the last meal? W.

This is just a question of the general use of these words. Usually we name the three meals, breakfast, luncheon and dinner. Even if the evening meal is served at an early hour and is the informal family meal, it is still usually referred to as dinner. When there is a service of food later in the evening, say after a bridge party or at a dance or after the theater, we speak of this as supper.

Feminine Smokers

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

A husband disapproves of his wife's smoking, and she respects his wishes in his presence. While visiting or in his own home he constantly offers his hostess or women guests cigarets and these women always accept. Who is wrong here? D.

No one is wrong here. Since the wife "respects her husband's wishes" and does not smoke in his presence, she wouldn't accept a cigaret even when the other women are smoking. But the husband naturally hasn't the right to suggest or to take for granted that the other women do not smoke; therefore he would politely offer them a cigaret and since they are not called on to respect his wishes about not smoking, they naturally will take a cigaret if they wish to.

The Beauty Box

By HELEN FOLLETT

Girls who are looking for beauty magic are forever asking about lotions to make the eyes sparkle. It is dangerous to use drugs for this purpose. Eye specialists are very emphatic on that subject. Health, animation and lively wit are eye lighters.

Moist feet are the ones that get cold. Sprinkle a foot powder inside the shoe and inside the foot of the stocking. Bathe the feet every night with a soda solution. Ordinary baking soda is what we mean. Dissolve a teaspoon in a quart or two of warm water.

Such a time as green powder has had trying to win the affections of the beauty questers. 'Tisn't new at all. They were offering it in Paris 10 years ago. On the red-headed sister with the pale skin it works, it really does. But the way to manage it is to fluff it on lightly and then ply a second layer, that one of creamy powder. She of the auburn nimbus must match her rouge to her hair. If she doesn't there'll be a color fight. Strange to relate, the combination of hues is becoming.

How to Keep Well

By DR. ROYAL S. COPELAND

'Self-Consciousness' Is the Bane of Youth

Dr. Copeland

Recently, I have received an unusual number of letters from young readers requesting advice about what they call "self-consciousness." A young girl writes, "What can I do to overcome self-consciousness? I am a high school girl and suffer from nervousness when I have to recite before the class. I get so wrought up that I feel sick and cannot eat; otherwise, I am apparently well and healthy."

Another girl writes, "I found this trouble to be a drawback to me at school and now it hurts me in business. Sometimes I am actually sick and my hand shakes so that I can hardly write my name. I cannot afford to be like this and it proves very embarrassing at times."

Self-consciousness is not an uncommon complaint of young adults. It can usually be traced to a foolish feeling of inferiority. This is founded on that state of mind in which a person imagines he is inferior to or certainly not as capable as others. A child who is undersized, weak or sickly and physically unable to compete with other children, may develop what we call an "inferiority complex." This may haunt him for years or throughout life.

As I have said, this feeling of self-consciousness usually develops in early childhood. Careless remarks or frequent criticism from young companions may cause a sensitive child to become self-conscious. Often these remarks are harbored for years and may never be forgotten.

For example, the young girl who has difficulty in reciting before her class, may have been ridiculed or severely scolded for poor recitations during her earlier school days. If she could overcome her fear and apprehension, it is probable she would be able to recite as well as any other member of her class. If she could only make herself believe there is nothing to be feared and that she is as capable as her classmates, she would calmly recite her lesson.

Too often, these young persons have a feeling of loneliness and a conviction that their elders do not understand them. At this stage, advice and encouragement will overcome the handicap.

It is easy for me to write this, but I appreciate how difficult it really is to get that essential help. But do not hesitate to seek advice from your elders. Benefit by their experience and suggestions.

Bear in mind, that many of your strange feelings and problems are similar to those experienced by your parents and all of their generation. Do not think you are abnormal and different from other people. You are not, and all such thoughts only lead to greater self-consciousness.

You can remedy your present short-comings only if you make a sincere effort to overcome them. Do not consider yourself as hopeless and inferior to your companions. Train yourself to think you are as good as anybody and you will soon outshine them.

These Are Lovely for Spring

Here are some advance spring sweaters that will certainly meet with the approval of the particular woman. The sweater with the pert matching hat is knitted and has a striking stitch that forms the yoke, sleeve and part of the hat. It is very easy to do and gives that different touch that means smartness. The sport vest has a very special feature—it is made of scraps of wool crocheted in stripes! Not only are a variety of colors used, but also different weights of wool. In the vest illustrated the same colors were repeated in each stripe, each color using less than a ball of wool and some only a few yards of yarn. These models were designed and made by Laura Wheeler and are only available in this pattern.

Pattern 648 comes to you with exact directions for making the sweater, hat and vest, wool requirements and illustrations of stitches.

Send 10 cents for this pattern to Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph Needlecraft Department, 82 Eighth avenue, New York City.

Humes Not to Run for Democratic Chairman

By MARK SHIELDS

Though independent Democrats probably will make a fight for control of the party machinery in Allegheny County, they will not do so through the candidacy of Maj. E. Lowry Humes for county chairman as an opponent to the incumbent, David L. Lawrence.

Mr. Shields

Maj. Humes will not be a candidate, a statement that he made with emphasis today. His comment was inspired by the circulation of petitions to put his name on the ballot as a rival to Lawrence. However, it was made clear in the independent circle in which Humes moves, there will be a fight, and Malcolm McDonald, who led it in 1932, probably will do so again.

In that year he gave Lawrence a sharp fight. Since then there has been a heavy increase in the Democratic enrollment in city and county, and no one can forecast what effect this will have, though in the Pittsburgh primary of 1933 the regulars, backing Mayor William N. McNair for the mayoralty nomination, scored a whacking victory over John M. Henry, supported by the anti-Lawrence group.

Fight to Be Linked With State Battles

The county chairmanship fight will link up with the contest for state and national office, just as the fight in 1932 surrounded the struggle for delegates to the Democratc national convention.

It may require some time for the position of Mayor McNair to become clarified. Recently he has shown little love for Lawrence and Joseph F. Guffey, preferring Roland S. Morris, of Philadelphia, rather than Guffey as a senatorial candidate. However, there are stories that the Mayor, himself a candidate for Governor, may seek his own running mate for the Senate and stage a fight all along the line.

The Republican state situation has become fantastic, and some of the local candidtes are becoming disgusted at the weakness and vacillation being exhibited by the regular leaders. They are fearful that the existing confusion is carefully designed to result in a "compromise" on some old-liner as a candidate for Governor.

This, some local candidates feel, would mean their defeat in liberal districts, and they don't like the prospect. Within the last few days some men politically active in Allegheny County, heretofore affiliated with the organization, have asserted that they were in the humor to campaign for Gov. Pinchot for the Senate, and would be glad to support Attorney General William A. Schnader for Governor.

Senator Frank J. Harris, talking in the East, says he expects to file petitions for Governor. There was not in the Senator's statement, however, any unequivocal declaration that his name will be on the primary ballot. Despite this, the Senator has been extremely active in conferences recently, and is known to have the warm regard of Senator James J. Davis.

Philadelphia Judge Is Hardly in the Running

United States Senator David A. Reed, while admiring Senator Harris, might not wish him for a running mate, principally because both are from Pittsburgh. It may be that the wishes of Mr. Reed will not be paramount.

Judge Robert E. Lamberton, of the Philadelphia Common Pleas Court, now says he would like to be a candidate for Governor on a platform opposing the Roosevelt policies in toto. The judge says he is only waiting for a "real demand" before making an announcement.

For the judge there will be no "real demand." The best evidence that local candidates would not care for his style of pitching is their announcements of fealty to the national recovery program.

Petitions to put the name of State Treasurer Charles A. Waters on the ballot as a candidate for Governor are in circulation. Mr. Waters has some strong backing in Philadelphia, and might be befriended by Joseph R. Grundy.

State Senator Leon G. Prince within a few days is expected to announce as a candidate for Lieutenant Governor. Senator Prince is one of the outstanding men of the Senate, despite physical handicaps, and is listened to with more attention than any other member when he talks. He is a constitutionalist, a stickler for tradition, and in the Senate has voted with some independence, usually more with the organization than Governor Pinchot. He does not believe in the direct primary.

Alliance Possible of Phillips, McFadden

There is an interesting angle to a story out of Washington that Congressman Louis T. McFadden was being boomed for the Senate, backed by a campaign fund furnished by "Western Pennsylvania oil men." Charles Carroll, former president of the Young Republicans, is reported interested in the McFadden boom.

Carroll also is enthusiastically for former Congressman Thomas W. Phillips, of Butler, for Governor. Among other things, Mr. Phillips is an oil man. He has said he would run independently, but the present incident may be something of a feeler to determine if a Phillips - McFadden ticket can be formed.

It would not be a weak combination.

3D WARD VOTE SENTENCES TOMORROW

Seven Already Given Penalties, Others Await Fate

Having imposed jail and penitentiary terms yesterday upon Thomas Dolan and six other members of election boards of the eighth and tenth districts of the Fourth Ward for election frauds, Federal Judge F. P. Schoonmaker will next have before him for sentence three members of the first district, Third Ward, election board.

Joseph S. Gagliardino, judge, and Dominick Mastrianni and Ralph Scanga, inspectors, convicted November 29, will hear their fate tomorrow morning.

Members of other boards have been ordered to appear for sentence Friday and Monday. Dates for sentencing others of the 54 men and women found guilty in 12 trials have not been set.

DOLAN TERM LONGEST

The 18 months penitentiary sentence given Dolan, judge of the election board of the Eighth District, Fourth Ward, was the heaviest imposed. William Connolly, an inspector on the same board, was given a sentence of one year and one day in the penitentiary, and Mrs. Alice Daschbach, an inspector, was fined $1,000 and sentenced one day in jail.

Albert Diulius, judge, and Joseph Ridge, constable, of the election board of the Tenth District, Fourth Ward, were sentenced to one year and one day in the penitentiary, and Albert Levine and William Kennedy, inspectors on the same board, each four months in jail.

WOMAN GIVEN TIME

Mrs. Daschbach's sentence was continued until next Monday in order to permit her time to pay the fine. Otherwise she would have been committed to jail in default of payment.

Levine and Kennedy began serving their jail sentences, but Dolan, Connolly, Ridge and Diulius were granted permission to appeal to the United States Circuit Court, and were released on $2,500 bond each.

Mrs. Daschbach wept and was aided from the courtroom by her husband, John Daschbach, former city detective, and Dolan.

Before sentence was imposed on Kennedy, First Assistant United States Attorney James I. Marsh told the court the defendant failed to tell the same story on the witness stand that he had given in the District Attorney's office. Kennedy said he feared he "would be taken for a ride."

Reid Trying First Case for Defense

B. Meredith Reid, who recently resigned as an assistant district attorney, was trying his first case from the other side of the counsel table in Criminal Court today. He was defending Guido Ciardi, 2612 Brownsville road, charged with arson in connection with the burning of his fruit store.

WILL ROGERS SAYS

BEVERLY HILLS, Cal., March 7. To the Editor Sun-Telegraph:

Statistics is about the poorest form of reading that we have to listen to. But I believe these that President Roosevelt used ought to be drummed into our heads.

Will Rogers

"Ninety per cent of our people live on salary or wages. Ten per cent on profits alone. People in this country whose income is less than two thousand a year buy more than two-thirds of all the goods sold."

His talk come at a mighty opportune time, for lots of folks had figured "Ah, well, the NRA has died out, why have to abide by it." This will put new life in it and incidentally throw a scare into some of the boys.

Yours,
WILL.

One Woman Dies, Ill Wife Saved In Home Fires

While flames swept over the roof of their Squirrel Hill home, Harry Lebman lifted his sick wife from her bed and, both clad in night clothes, carried her to the street early today.

Attorney and Mrs. M. H. Ewing, other occupants of the two and one-half story brick house at 1341 Beechwood boulevard, also were routed from their beds. They escaped without injury.

The flames were discovered at 4 a. m. They had originated in the attic.

Firemen succeeded in confining the fire to the roof.

Battalion Chief John Zollinger estimated the damage at $3,000.

Mrs. Lillian Bentz, 44, of 412 Camfield street, Knoxville, died in South Side Hospital early today from burns received when cleaning fluid she was using on a dress ignited in the basement of her home last night.

Her brother, Raymond McGilton, and his wife, Martha, suffered burns on the hands while extinguishing the flames. Firemen were summoned when the woodwork ignited. Carried out of the burning basement, Mrs. Bentz was taken to the hospital.

Mrs. Bentz's mother, Mrs. Anna McGilton, was carried from her sick bed to the home of a neighbor, Edward Dawson, of 414 Camfield street, and Robert Bombe, of 408 Camfield street, rushed into the basement with a garden hose and prevented the fire from spreading. Firemen estimated the damage at $25.

BAR STUDIES DEMAND FOR JUDGES' QUIZ

Committee to Draft Plans for Probe of Political Activities

The judiciary committee of the Allegheny County Bar Association was to meet at 3 p. m. today in the City-County Building to act upon investigation of political activities of judges.

The committee today was to examine a resolution of the Bar Association, passed Friday night, demanding a probe into the judges' political activities.

How extensive the investigation will be and what procedure will be followed was to be determined at today's meeting. The chairman of the committee, Attorney William A. Challener, has declared that since the resolution for the investigation has already been made public he would favor open hearings at which complaints could be presented. The judiciary committee, Challener points out, is not composed of "investigators."

The committee, according to Challener, will study specific complaints brought before it, but has yet received no such complaints or facts.

The resolution for the investigation was presented by Attorney J. Garfield Houston.

THE ALLEGHENY'S GREAT ICE FLOES, NOW BROKEN INTO BITS, BOBBING TOWARDS THE OHIO AND THE WARM SOUTH AS SERIOUS DANGER OF FLOOD PASSES

ICE PACKS STILL FLOWS DOWN ALLEGHENY

Expert Stresses Need Of Control Plan As Waters Menace

The rivers were falling rapidly today, after having reached a crest of 25.8 feet for an hour late yesterday, less than a foot above the flood mark.

Patches of ice were still coming down the Allegheny, but the gigantic packs that filled the stream from shore to shore yesterday were far down the Ohio.

The stage at the Point at 8 a. m. was 21.4 feet, a drop of 4.4 feet from the high point.

BOATS LEFT STRANDED

The quick fall of the Allegheny caught boatmen unawares. Several craft which had been moored close to the bank were left stranded on the bank as the river receded.

The flood wave which followed the gorges in the Allegheny flattened out after reaching the Ohio, Observer W. S. Brotzman reported, and caused no flood stages along the Ohio Valley. The Ohio was falling at East Liverpool, allaying fears of possible high water.

Predicted colder weather also will tend to hasten the fall of the streams, Brotzman said.

Flood Control Project Boosted During Menace

Threat of one of the worst floods here in the last 25 years, which was dissipated last night, is cited by Maj. W. D. Styer, United States District Engineer here, as a strong argument for the flood control plan of the Flood Commission of Pittsburgh.

Maj. Styer told the Engineers' Society of Western Pennsylvania last night in the William Penn Hotel that the $12,000,000 dam and navigation reservoir in the Tygart River valley above Grafton, W. Va., would help to alleviate river dangers in the Pittsburgh district. This reservoir is one of the eight proposed by the Flood Commission and is the first to be authorized by the government. He said, in part:

"The calculated effect of the project upon flood conditions in terms of flood frequency, for instance, at Pittsburgh, shows that a flood with an average frequency of once in five years would occur about once in 6.1 years.

"The reservoir would, of course, have a more marked effect upon those municipalities nearer than Pittsburgh to the dam."

CITES PROJECT VALUES

Outlining the value of the Tygart project to river communities during low water stages, Styer said a flow of water could be maintained from the reservoir at all times equivalent to the low water requirements of river interests. He added:

"It is estimated that the Tygart project will be able to accommodate the water supply requirements of navigation on the Monongahela River. Not only will it assure an adequate navigation water supply for the locks and dams on the Monongahela River, but the storage replenished annually can be drawn out annually. It will serve to increase the navigable depth in the navigation pools with consequent benefit to navigation."

Bill Sends a Costly Bracelet to Pippin

CHAPTER XI.

Pippin stood before her mirror. With ringing voice and dramatic gesture she rehearsed her graduation speech. It was a notable effort, astir with poetic phrase and lofty sentiment:

"Let us be worthy of the beautiful setting into which the great Artist-God has placed us!"

"Aw, that's rotten — that's terrible!"

"Gee—you're vain, standing before a mirror every night and shouting your face off. Guess you think you're grand!"

"Who told you to sneak in and listen?"

"Well—I got here. I've been in the closet every night except when I was late and had to peek at the door. It's lousy. You better look out, they'll hiss."

"Well—you don't need to cry about it. I guess it's not that bad."

"Yes, it is—it's awful, and it's too late to write another. It's idiotic. I want to die!"

"Can't you cut out the airs and the gestures? They make me feel creepy. Then it'll be okeh, I guess."

Problems and Panic

Pippin considered the advice of her 9-year-old critic as though he were a veteran stage director. She sat up long after midnight agonizing over the starry phrases that she loved. They must go! In the end she cut out all her airs and left only two of her heartfelt gestures.

"Lots better," said young Bruce.

"It's swell," offered Dadee, who felt grown up in long pants and his first attack of chivalry. Secretly the boy longed to take Jon's place in his sister's affections. "It's a grand speech. I wish I could recite poetry the way you do."

"Oh, you darling!" said the young princess mistily.

They were tremulous days. Pippin and Kathie were full of problems and panic. They had gone through school together and now wondered anxiously if they would make the same house at college. New friends are never as sweet as old! The whole glowing future moved upon them imperiously. Right use must be made of it. Don't let them turn you into empty little butterflies! But would their gowns be right and which bouquets to carry?

Jonathan Proud

At last the confusion was ended. The great night came. All in white and with a strained smile on her lips, Pippin met her mother's happy, misted eyes.

"I'm so frightened, mother."

"You'll make us all proud."

"I hope so."

"Aw sure you will," from the brothers. "Somebody'll see you there and maybe give you a job in the movies!"

That sent Pippin up on wings. She felt like young Jon leading the world to glory. Some of the gestures came back as she called with deep, impassioned earnestness:

"Let us, born into this beautiful land where purple mountain meets the golden sea, prove worthy of our heritage. With one aim, one purpose, one desire, let us work to bring mankind to noble, emancipated, rejoicing brotherhood!"

Jonathan leaned forward and wiped away tears. He sat there like a mighty old king in new tuxedo and brilliantine on his mustache. Blinking and proud, he nudged the stranger sitting next him: "My granddaughter, sir! She composed that speech all by herself—every word of it."

The two girls, all in a flutter, came toward them. Pippin's brothers, happy and important, followed. They were loaded with the flowers.

Ready for New World

Then Jonathan bowed his great head and whispered: "Just like you were, Chickie-girl. Just like you!"

It made a strange tingling up her neck. Grand old Jonathan! Remembering only her pride and beauty. Never the hurt and shame.

Chickie pulled the brim of her hat, not wanting David to see her weep. But he leaned down with a grin, his eyes beautiful and put a handkerchief in her hands: "Me, too, lady dear. Does something to

FLOOD PERILS SHOWBOAT

Capt. Billy Menke's showboat "Golden Rod," in which he and Carnegie Tech players had put on the latest collegiate entertainment for Ohio Valley towns, was in a bad way today.

The massive three-decker lay below the Sixth street bridge, one side on the wharf, the other in the rapidly receding waters of the Allegheny River.

Someone apparently had moored the craft last night, not anticipating the sudden drop of the stream. Unable to follow the downward trend it became stranded.

A watchman today appealed to the United States engineers for tugboats to help drag the showboat back into the river, lest its hull be ruined.

Munhall Wife Charges Mate Wed Again

Ethel Starr Fundis, of Munhall, yesterday asked Judge Elder W. Marshall for a divorce from Howard W. Fundis, of Trafford City, charging he had married another woman.

She submitted a copy of a marriage license issued here to Howard W. Fundis and Helen E. Mullner September 13, 1928, showing that they had been married at St. Basil's rectory, Brownsville road. This record gave Fundis' age as 33.

Mrs. Fundis testified she had called up the Fundis home in Trafford City, and was informed Fundis had obtained a divorce in Westmoreland County. She testified the records had been searched in that county, but no evidence of the divorce was found.

She testified she and Fundis were married in February, 1919.

Wire Cage to Replace Rail That Held Soles

A heavy wire cage for confinement of prisoners in the County Detective Bureau will replace the iron rail to which Robert S. Soles was handcuffed while being questioned by detectives in the death of his wife, District Attorney Andrew T. Park announced today. The rail will be ripped out at once.

At Soles' trial in which he was acquitted, his attorneys charged that while their client was being questioned he was fastened to the rail and given the "third degree." Park, present at the time, regarded the charges as being aimed at him.

The new cage will be eight by 10 feet, divided into two compartments, each having chairs.

YEAGER SEEKS ASSEMBLY SEAT

On a liberal platform, Jacob Yeager, former Nineteenth Ward alderman and workmen's compensation referee, is a candidate for the Legislature in the Sixth District. He is an exponent of reduced rates for gas and electric service, and favors:

City manager for Pittsburgh, additional funds for mothers' assistance, stronger election laws, consolidation of local government agencies to reduce taxation and create efficiency, permanent milk control agency, safety legislation for railroads, trucks and buses, assistance for the blind, strengthening workmen's compensation laws, removing compensation board from jurisdiction of Department of Labor and Industry, equitable subsidies for school districts, graduated income tax for school purposes, minimum wage laws for women and children, strict child labor laws, abolition of the sweatshop, abolition of coal and iron police and privately-paid deputy sheriffs, revision of the constitution.

Yeager, a railroad man, has been active in labor and fraternal affairs, and in independent political movements.

M'NAIR SPIKES RADIO BIDS

Mayor McNair today suggested that all bids for the city's police radio contract for 1934 be rejected and new specifications be prepared.

Barton Auto Radio Corporation, holder of the 1932 and 1933 contracts, and tentatively awarded this year's contract, has been charged by a competitor, Aircraft Radio Products Company, with price padding and failure to deliver all the goods bought by the city.

City Controller James P. Kerr has held two hearings where the charges were aired, and was to hear more testimony tomorrow. The Mayor's request will cause a new set of bids to be presented.

County Will Oppose Court Pension Rule

Battle on Order of Judges for Payment Expected

Allegheny County undoubtedly will contest the verdict compelling it to pay $75,000 into the county pension fund, according to Assistant County Solicitor John H. Lauer.

Judges Ambrose B. Reid, Samuel H. Gardner and William H. McNaugher ordered payment yesterday in a mandamus action brought by the Pension Fund Board.

The action, if upheld, will bring relief to 277 pensioned county employes who have received no payment since last July. Some 15 of the pensioners have applied for welfare relief, according to welfare inquiries at the Controller's office. Many others are reported by friends to be in desperate financial straits.

LEADERS FIGHT PENSION

Commissioners C. M. Barr and C. C. McGovern opposed payment of the pension on the ground that the fund was insolvent. Commissioner W. D. Mansfield, chairman of the Pension Fund Board, and Controller Robert G. Woodside were instrumental in bringing the mandamus action.

Lauer, although not speaking officially in the absence of Commissioners McGovern and Mansfield, said he had no doubt the decision would be contested.

Demand for an additional $75,000 from the county fund would create a considerable deficit, the fund now showing a $24,237 surplus.

No appropriation for the pension has been made for this year, with $125,000 estimated as necessary. Lauer said it was doubtful whether the court's action would force this extra payment since no appropriation has been set up.

PAID UNDER COYNE ACT

The present pension is paid under the Coyne Act of 1933, in which the county and the employes contribute an equal amount to the fund. Employes now give 3 per cent of their salaries.

George B. Buck, New York actuary, has estimated employes would have to give 4.62 per cent more to put the fund on a solvent basis. He claimed the fund is growing more and more insolvent. There is about $160,000 now in the fund.

Commissioners McGovern and Barr have stated they are for a pension, but wish one set on a solvent basis.

Lauer said the court's decision would be contested chiefly on the grounds of constitutionality and the insolvency of the fund.

MAYOR TALKS OF FREE PORTS

Free ports of trade were Mayor William N. McNair's chief topic of discussion at the monthly luncheon of the Pittsburgh Consular Association in Kaufmann's yesterday.

After questioning the consuls on the success of the free port policy in such cities as Danzig, Hamburg, Gdynia and Fiume, the Mayor outlined his plan for restoring Pittsburgh to industrial prosperity by making it a free port.

Under his plan only goods imported into Pittsburgh that are actually sold would be taxed, the tariff being paid after the sale is made. All unused goods, returned to the exporter, would be tax-free.

The adoption of such a ruling, it is the Mayor's belief, would attract manufacturers to Pittsburgh.

Mr. McNair voiced his intention of inviting Roman Kutylowski, president of the Gdynia-American Line, to speak on Gdynia's success as a free port city at a future Henry George luncheon.

CITY TO DIVIDE WORK TO AVOID DISMISSALS

An agreement with the Civil Service Commission which will permit City Council to stagger work among employes doing similar work rather than dismissing them, has been announced by City Solicitor Cornelius D. Scully.

The Commission, it is reported, has agreed to dividing up the work, but stands solidly against removal of civil service protection from the employes or any move by Council to take the power of hiring and firing out of the hands of Council.

Members of Council yesterday in budget session disclaimed any intention of doing anything but arrange for a furlough system to protect the low-salaried group from dismissals.

To bring this about, however, Council had suggested the elimination for one year of the rule of the Civil Service Commission which provides that in case dismissals are made necessary by lack of funds the least meritorious employes go first.

A letter in which the Civil Service Commission abruptly refused to make the change brought some caustic comments from members of Council yesterday.

Councilman John J. Kane said:

"I am for putting the Civil Service Commission on full time work. Today they look like retired business men enjoying sinecures."

Councilman William A. Magee, who suggested the amendment, asked Scully what reason prevents the Commission from doing what Council asked, and Scully replied that the Civil Service Commission is the judge of its own rules and regulations.

CITY MAY CUT HIGHER-PAID WORKERS

Council has granted a 10 per cent wage increase to city employes receiving $1,500 or less, thus putting the city budget another $250,000 out of balance.

At the same time there is talk of reducing the salaries of the higher-paid employes to make up the difference.

The probabilities are that the budget will be closed this week, but there are serious doubts whether the city's expenditures for this year, now approximately $2,000,000 over estimated revenue, will be brought within its income.

TURBULENT SESSION

In a turbulent session in which the NRA, wealthy tax dodgers and utility tax exemptions were discussed, Council voted 6 to 3 for the pay increase for the low-salaried group. The motion was made by John J. Kane and seconded by Thomas J. Gallagher.

Another proposed motion by Kane to reduce the salaries of Councilmen from $8,000 to $7,000 was withheld. Council also voted to keep its chauffeur.

As to where the money is to come from for the salary increase, Kane said:

"We can go out and collect delinquent taxes from some of the big tax dodgers."

Councilman William A. Magee reminded Council of an existing deficit of approximately $4,000,000, and city revenues for the first two months of this year running about 4 per cent behind last year.

MAGEE'S WARNING

He warned:

"The policy in Mr. Kane's motion will lead to the payroll not receiving any money toward the end of this year."

Kane criticized businessmen who come to tell Council what to do. He said:

"The whole system is wrong. The big businessmen cannot run their own business."

The motion for the pay increase passed, six to three, Magee, P. J. McArdle and Robert Garland voting against it.

Later in the day, Council by a vote of eight to one gave a negative recommendation to a resolution ending the agreement between the city and the South Pittsburgh Water Company by which the city pays for water at the company rate and bills residents of the South Hills at the lower city rate.

IGNORE PERMIT FOR 'COTTAGE'

The construction of a model small-cost cottage of frame construction on city property, at Sixth avenue and Forbes street, is going forward despite some arguments in the matter of a building permit.

H. L. Ley, who has been replaced by George E. Evans as superintendent of the Bureau of Building Inspection, had refused to grant a permit for the cottage.

But Richard Neff, engineer in the Bureau of Building Inspection, said yesterday that he had granted a temporary permit on the written recommendation of E. J. Foley, chief of city property.

Council has disregarded a copy of a letter from Mayor McNair to the Board of Public Education regarding use of the Ralston School Building in Penn avenue as a dormitory for men in Shanty Town.

COUNCIL VETOES 'EXPO' PLAN

The Greater Pittsburgh Exposition Society's request for a 50-year lease from the city on property at the Point as a site for a $5,000,000 convention hall has received a negative recommendation in Finance Committee of Council.

The vote was 6 to 3, Robert Garland, William A. Magee and William J. Soost favoring the project.

Recently the project was given an affirmative recommendation in the same body, but when it went to general session in Council received a setback in the form of a letter from the City Planning Commission which declared that such a hall would interfere with city traffic plans at the Point.

The society offered to pay the city 3 per cent of its gross revenue annually for the use of the property. It was proposed to finance the building by leasing exhibit space to industries and renting the auditorium for boxing and conventions.

They think Walter Slezak, who had a lead role in "Music in the Air," and Mady Christians of the Guild's "Races" are secretly blended . . . Fannie Brice, who has had laryngitis for ten weeks, has lost side jobs—which would have enriched her 30 Gs . . . The Tammany Hall leadership will probably be settled by a committee of three—with Farley in control of Manhattan as he now is in B'klyn . . . The lawyers working on the Ivar Kreuger mystery cannot locate 110 million that the match monarch withdrew for himself . . . Add last laughs: A doorman of a midtown night club—who was fired because he permitted the entry of two cops (who shook down the management) is now a special investigator for the Mayor!

The Alexander Hamilton Eds, of Sutton Place (she was Katherine Conly of Tuxedo Park) are still tenting in the same tepee—but they are considering a serious decision . . . He's the current Weights and Measures man at City hall . . . Jane Froman of the "Follies" dropped out of the cast temporarily—because of a breakdown . . . Eleanor Ambrose is coming out of her retirement and will dance again with Charles Sabin . . . The town's most conservative gazette was the only one to refuse the Paree's "gigolo" ad . . . Bernie Hyman, Metro associate producer, is huddling with Elliott Roosevelt for the latter to write an original movie story around the careers of his father and T. R.

Milton Berle was asked permission to loan some of his jokes and he threatened the acker with a suit for plagiarism if he took one word! . . . In the new Dillingham show, "New Faces," the groom of Elsie Janis will play bits . . . Phil Reed and Marion Nixon are yes, indeedy. He was Milton LeRoy on Broadway . . . H. L. Doherty, the man with all that money in Florida, now has two bodyguards . . . Eddie Cantor went for several thousands at the Miami wheels . . . Sophie Tucker quit her cafe job because of a $1,000 shave . . . Since gambling was prohibited in Hollywood the town is back to normal—meaning dead . . . One of the better known sports celebs's wives is now in Reno . . . David Hutton was burgled in San Diego the other night . . . Ann Harding and Mark Goodrich are doing cross-word puzzles together.

Mayor LaGuardia will open a special free gambling exhibit at Radio City Monday night, with a flock of captured slot machines and lecturers . . . Katherine Howard, fashion editor, has gone into movies—appearing opposite W. C. Fields in his new Paramount picture . . . Merry Fahrney Van Eisner's current is J. Maschio—west coast agent . . . They say that Garbo attended the Carnera-Loughran fight because she wanted to be alone . . . Chaplin has big holdings in California vineyards—and is making so much coin he may not make another flicker for years . . . H. Ruskin and Dorothy Dawes of the E. Carroll tribe are panting . . . Amelia Stone will appreciate it very much, she says, if it is stated that she isn't dead, as was reported elsewhere . . . The Neil Hamiltons will add two more San Francisco tots to the one they've already adopted.

It's a girl over at the William Cornells of World War renown . . . Why is it that Frank and Jack of 45th, two of the squarest men in town—just got their license? They've staked more "bent" citizens than anybody! . . . "Patsy" Kelly stole all the preview notices on "Countess of Monte Cristo" . . . Ben Bernie, when he returns to the coast, does so at four times the money he got when he flopped there a few years ago . . . When Meredith Howard, who recently married, paused in Raleigh to dine with her groom—they met her ex-husband—and the three had such fun!

Prince George Sherbatoff and Enid Snow are closer than three is to four . . . Although an army of friends are working hard for John Broderick's reinstatement as first grade detective, it looks like his stay in the sticks will be protracted indefinitely . . . Betty Kean of the Palais Royal is being rushed by a phoney Secret Service agent, who is being awaited with a bat the next time he comes there . . . Was Gay Orlova of "Murder at the Vanities" sealed March 1 to a Majestic Theater usher? . . . Local politicians and officials (whose names were found in the records seized at those slot-machine office raids) can breathe a little easier . . . Apparently no basis for prosecution can be found—and they will not be identified in the public prints.

Gleason May Write, Act or Direct

James Gleason, known variously as actor, writer, dialogue director and director, has been signed to a new Fox contract which will permit him to indulge in all or any of his versatile talents. No definite assignment has been given Gleason, but it is possible that he will write, act and direct in the same picture, one of Fox's productions for next season's release.

Bellamy in Same Role For Third Time

Foreign Stars Are Learning How to Spend Some Of Their Dollars

By CINEMA

HOLLYWOOD, March 7.—The Hollywood Indians are suffering an awakening consciousness of the Great White Father. Washington is showing some attention to the braves and squaws out here. The Dickstein bill is distressing 50 per cent of the citizens, those who came from Europe instead of Iowa. The Federal Trade Commission is charged with the discovery that about 80 per cent of Hollywood's income has been going to 8 per cent of its citizens. And current exchange rates are disturbing so many of the high salaried stars who sent all their money back to their ome country and live on grapefruit in a bungalow court.

You suddenly are seeing Europeans in the shops. They are buying on occasion sweat-shirts of American cotton and broiling an occasional slice from a Kansas steer. Sending all the money home is not as fashionable as it once was, and it isn't a habit pointed out as indicative of real brains and astuteness.

The new fad is to spend American money in America, keep your fingers crossed and flirt with citizenship papers. Hollywood had so completely recovered from the revolution of the Talkies, it's like its old self with these rockets from Washington exploding in its ever sunny skies.

What are the after-dinner jokers going to do about the New Sam Goldwyn! For years that gentleman provided Hollywood with all its best anecdotes, its most inspired grammatical blunders, and its fanciest weddings. Mr. Goldwyn has become lofty.

Having rewritten Zola with box-office success, he is contributing to the literary magazines and delivering addresses at Harvard, Philadelphia and Cambridge are understanding him. And his remarks used to convulse this Western seat of culture!

Is the local intelligentsia embarrassed! Here it had a litterateur and orator around all the time. And not one of the three thousand professional clairvoyants who flourish as advisers to the industry ever had mentioned it.

The King of Siam will visit Hollywood shortly. As the first King, naturally, the social leaders will have to do something about it. Every star has entertained at least one prince and no end of duchesses. But with Pickfair, official host of titles, in throes of domestic revolution, competion over a King will be frantic. A little appropriate Siamese cattiness already is being manifested among the social leaders.

Mr. Will Hays, they insist, found a little spice in Buddy De Salva's brand new musical movie, "Bottoms Up." He recommended less heat here and there. As a gentleman very conscientious about keeping a level temperature in movies, Mr. Hays' criticisms were submitted to a committee of amateur purity experts. All disinterested executives. They found the picture very nice. So there you are. Mr. De Sylva's blushes are saved and all are very, very happy.

Jean Arthur is another little girl whose movie career was furthered by a trip to New York and an appearance on the Broadway stage. She was becoming conspicuously inconspicuous when she decided to go East. Since her return she has been busy.

No sooner has Jean stepped out of the character she assumed to captivate Jack Holt in "The Whirlpool," than Columbia gave her the lead in "The Most Precious Thing in Life." She will play Biddy in this Travis Ingham story. "Biddy." Richard Cromwell will be the college student. Other stars will be assigned to the other roles, for the production will be ambitious.

Mystery Play Premiere In I. K. S.

By GEORGE SEIBEL

In four acts and many scenes the weird doings in the old castle of Schwarzenstein were unfolded on the stage of the Irene Kaufmann Settlement Theater last night, as Sarah C. Pettit's drama, "The Guest," received its first presentation. It starts out like a drama of the supernatural, for the castle is haunted by the spirit of a cavalier who was shabbily treated and thrown to his death long long ago, and now makes his appearance whenever there is a vacant chair at the table—very much like Banquo's ghost. His appearance always results in another death among the guests.

Mr. Seibel

So when in 1889 some Americans of the Schwarzenstein line, now called Blackstone, visit the old castle on the Rhine, the Guest comes to lure young Cecilie over the cliff in a ghostly minuet.

Thirty years later the Cecilie of the next generation comes to the old castle, now purchased by the brother of the dead girl. This Cecilie also sees strange sights and hears strange sounds, until the family call in a handsome American lieutenant who appears to be somewhat of a sleuth. While Cecilie the second thinks she is losing her mind, he captures the ex-soldier who appears to be conducting some sort of boot-legging racket with wine, depositing his profits in a bank at Cologne. It all ends with a triple salute of the army to the fair Cecilie's lips.

"The Guest" is narrative rather than dramatic, and you are left uncertain whether there are real ghosts or just spirituous bootleggers. The stage setting was very effective, but the acting mechanical. Ruth Kalson was the first Cecilie, and Mildred Romack the second; Ben L. Singer, the Guest, and Leonard Cohen, the lieutenant sleuth. The drama will be repeated tonight.

New Deal Talk On Screen

President Roosevelt is seen and heard in the current issue of Hearst Metrotone News as he talks to the business leaders of the country, and to the nation over the radio, at the code conference in Washington. The President declared that the New Deal must be permanently extended to prevent mal-distribution of wealth and power, and emphasized that "it is the immediate task of industry to employ more people at purchasing wages, and do it now."

Pictures also show many towns and cities in the East menaced by floods with the advent of spring-like temperatures following the heavy snows. The Globe Trotter describes the scenes of threatening disaster in many localities.

Officials of the Crown Point, Ind., jail re-enact the escape from that institution of the notorious bandit, Jack Dillinger. There are intimate pictures of the bandit, of Sheriff Lillian Holley from whose custody he escaped, and of Edwin Saeger, garage foreman who was kidnaped by the gangster.

Half-pint boxers, sons of prominent visitors at Miami, Fla., "battle" for the championship, with Primo Carnera and Tommy Loughran acting as seconds.

NOTE — Owing to the necessity upon theater managers to arrange their programs in time schedule, it is possible some of the subjects of the above issue of Hearst Metrotone News may not be shown in your theater.

Dramatic

Will Has Visitor

Nixon Books Jeritza

Harry Brown, manager of the Nixon, announces that Mme. Jeritza, operatic star, making her debut in light opera in this country, will be heard in Rudolf Friml's new operetta, "Annina," in the Nixon, April 2. This is Friml's first score since "The Three Musketeers." The book is by Rowland Leigh and William Thiele, with lyrics by Mr. Leigh. Mr. Thiele, who is a well-known Vienna director, was brought to this country to stage the play.

Allan Jones, American tenor, will have the role opposite Mme. Jeritza. Others in the cast include Andrew Tombes, Louise Mele, Jack Good, Robert Lee Allen, Marie Hunt, Jules Epailly, a mixed chorus and a large dance ensemble. The engagement will be limited to one week only because Mme. Jeritza's operatic and radio contracts allow only a limited number of weeks on the light opera stage.

Handicap of Accent Turns Benefit

Tullio Carminati, stage actor lured to Hollywood several years ago, was kept out of talking pictures because of his marked foreign accent, which he tried without success to subdue! Then because of his accent, he was given a featured role opposite Constance Bennett in "Moulin Rouge." Tullio is still trying to figure it out!

Miss Swanson Signed For M-G-M Films

Signing of a contract with Gloria Swanson is announced by Metro-Goldwyn-Mayer. Although no definite decision has been reached as to her first vehicle under the new affiliation, it is considered likely that she may do a new screen adaptation of Elinor Glyn's "Three Weeks," with Irving Thalberg as producing supervisor. Miss Swanson's outstanding successes include "Manhandled," "Madame Sans Gene," "The Love of Sunya," "Tonight or Never" and "Perfect Understanding." For some years she was at the head of her own producing organization. "The Trespasser" was her first talking picture, and "Perfect Understanding" her most recent release.

Low Grade of Stage Shows Is Bound to React

By MICHAEL SHAW

When stage shows returned to the downtown movie houses this season, there was general rejoicing. Audiences were obviously hungry for flesh-and-blood entertainment and sick of the inept shorts used for so long to fill out the screen bills. Besides, people would be put back to work—musicians, stagehands, truckers and what-not.

It is consequently with some reluctance that we now confess grave disappointment and even dismay over the offerings we have seen to date.

We have looked at a lot of semi-naked dancers, and one entirely naked; we have had unsavory blackouts and nauseating jokes; worst of all, we have suffered numberless impersonations of effeminates, unfunny and disgusting.

Now the old axiom that there is a place for everything seems to hold good in this case.

Nobody enjoys a good, rowdy burlesque show more than we do; but we want to see it in a burlesque theater and not a movie cathedral.

And a clever blackout, let it be ever so naughty, may be welcome in a sophisticated -revue, patronized by sophisticates who know what they want, and are willing to pay for it; but it is out of place in a movie house where all kinds of people, old and young, drop in casually to "see a show."

Personally we have no children or impressionable young folks to take to the movies; but we wonder what parents think when they find such attractions in their favorite theaters. And we wonder whether the managers don't realize from the difference in audiences how the tone of their houses is being lowered.

Not long ago, for instance, we saw a stage show that belonged in a burlesque house if it belonged anywhere. And the audience belonged there, too. It was composed almost entirely of men, and their conduct was not notable for refinement. The men were there to see the strip dancer, and although they sat in somewhat shamed silence after her turn, they were noisy enough during the common jokes and restless throughout the rather respectable picture.

Women who wandered in to see the film were patently astonished at the stage goings-on. Some gasped audibly and at least one said, "How do they get away with it?"

Under the present policy, women and children are bound to be alienated from the movie houses and the "stag draw" will be increased. It is for the managers to decide which they want. They cannot have both.

Whether or not the shows are cleaned up entirely, we hope and pray that depiction of outright degeneracy may be eliminated, and forthwith. There is absolutely no excuse for it on any stage, least of all on a stage that caters to all classes and all ages.

Trip to Bermuda

(CONCLUSION)

ABOARD the S. S. Monarch of Bermuda:—I sail away from this beautiful island on this occasion with mingled emotions. I have been in Bermuda some eight days, and I was going to write a great deal more about the place. But under the conditions I think I'd better not.

For Bermuda has changed. To some folks, perhaps, it will have changed for the better. But to me—well, I don't know. Some intangible beauty has vanished; some restful charm has disappeared.

If, after my world tour, you had asked me in what part of the globe I wanted to spend the rest of my life, I would have told you Bermuda without the slightest hesitation. My memories of the lovely island were all very dear to me. They were memories of peace, of quiet, of heavenly softness.

Perhaps, feeling as I did, I should never have gone back to Bermuda at all. Because it is in attempting to recapture memories that we humans suffer our greatest disillusionments . . .

Bermuda, I am certain, attracted more American tourists during the Prohibition era than any other foreign port. The steamship lines offered attractive rates on excellent boats for a journey that lasted less than two days.

The island, itself, was quaint and beautiful. The shops offered "bargains" that appealed to the women. The hotels were plentiful, and not exorbitant in their rates. And the liquor was a relief to those who couldn't afford to pay for the right stuff in America.

Accordingly, Bermuda prospered mightily. Local society was very snooty. The Outerbridges, the Goslings and the Trimminghams spoke only to the Trimminghams, the Goslings and the Outerbridges. Police regulations on bars and cafes were rigidly enforced. And anyone who suggested gambling, or open stores on Sunday, would have been tossed into an asylum as a dangerous lunatic.

It is hard to believe that Americans looked upon Bermuda only as a drinking haven, because the spot is far too gorgeous for that. Yet, when the end of the Prohibition Act in the United States was definitely in sight and there was little attempt at enforcement, Bermuda entered a depression period that is now causing its people no little concern.

They have an unemployment situation to face. Even though the local paper makes light of it, it is there just the same. Visitors to the island are not as frequent, nor do they spend as they did in the golden days. The Furness Line, whose service to Bermuda is the last word in luxury and courtesy, will soon cut its sailings to the island to one boat a week five months in the year.

Feeling the pinch, the storekeepers of Bermuda will soon be permitted to open on Sundays from 1 to 4 in the afternoons. In former years these very storekeepers closed their doors at noon once or twice a week—and the customer who didn't arrive before noon found the door bolted on the dot.

But it is very different now. There are no half-holidays on week days, and Sunday will soon be a workday. The holier-than-thous seem to be the same all over this world. It took a sock in the pocketbook to make our holier-than-thous see the evils of Prohibition. And a kick in the same spot make Bermudians feel that, as long as they were only open half a day on the Sabbath, the Lord might close one eye . . .

While commenting on Bermuda in this friendly fashion, I would like to point out to the local chief of police an evil that is spreading very rapidly on the island. I refer to the fact that many of the colored natives are stepping entirely out of bounds in their attitude toward the tourists.

Riding around the island in a carriage with women, it is only a question of how many natives will offer comments that are totally unsolicited. Cries of "Hello, baby," "Where you goin', girls?" and other expressions that would not look so good in print, are common occurrences. To me, it's a gag. But to plenty of people who take these things seriously, it's very bad medicine.

Tourists of other years, of course, are to be blamed for the foundation of this trouble. But that doesn't help the situation any. If Bermuda doesn't watch out, it will harbor a case that will make the Massie mess seem like a kindergarten lesson . . .

Today in Bermuda, open gambling is in the wind. All through the years, when the island could have been turned into one of the most popular gaming resorts in the world, the powers swore it would never happen. Some three years ago, on the terrace of the Belmont Manor Hotel, I spoke to a leading Bermudian about it.

"You need a gambling house down here," I said. "The tourists expect it—and want it."

I will never forget the gentleman's answer.

"There will never be a gambling house in Bermuda," he replied. "Let other resorts do as they will. Let them open gambling houses to their hearts' content. We in Bermuda do not crave money that badly."

But a depression, evidently, can change more hearts than Peggy Joyce. Because there will be a gambling casino in Bermuda—and maybe two or three—before many months have slipped by.

Maybe that drastic change will give Bermuda a new lease on life. I wouldn't know. . . .

Thus is the loveliest of islands undergoing a transformation. But I suppose nothing beautiful can last forever. When I reached the island of Bali—Goona-Goona land—about a year ago, the million natives didn't know the meaning of a newspaper and hardly any of them could read or write their own language.

But when I return to Bali in a year or two—which I will surely do if I live—I feel fairly certain that I will step from a native canoe and tell a native a joke. Whereupon he will toss me a disgusted look and say:

"That's old. I read it in Winchell's column this morning." . . .

Howards to Appear In Short Films

Willie and Eugene Howard, principals in the current Ziegfeld Follies, have signed with Warner Brothers to do a series of film shorts on oldtime subjects using material of revues and "Passing Shows." Going back 20 years for the material the Howards claim will result in presenting actually new material to a new generation that never saw an edition of "The Passing Show."

Ordinary Cat Gets Job

Henry is only a cat. Not a very valuable cat, either. But that is just the kind of cat the script of "Fur Coats" called for. In other words, that was just the trouble. Ever try to find a well-trained cat of a nondescript breed, which will take orders from a movie director? Aristocratic cats there were in quantities.

Director Al Green had to have a common, alley variety of cat which answered to the name of Henry. Until Paul Kelly, as Tim O'Hara, marries Aline MacMahon, as Bertha Krasnoff (all this, of course, is part of the action in "Fur Coats"), Henry is the only other occupant of the big old house in which Bertha dwells on a San Francisco side-street. He appears in several scenes early in the picture and he must look friendly.

The prop department finally gave up in despair, having applied to all the trainers in the cinema capital. Then one of the "grips" on the set came forward. His wife had a cat at home. Just an ordinary cat, but very intelligent. She answered to the name of Bonny, but she could be called Henry no doubt, if persuaded.

The next morning Bonny arrived and was eminently satisfactory. There was nothing distinguished-looking about Bonny. But she had bright eyes and she looked well-fed. Also, she took a great shine to Aline MacMahon and their brief scenes together ran off without a hitch.

So now Bonny is in the movies as Henry!

Dance of Elephants To Be Spectacle

LeRoy Prinz, Paramount's competition for Warner's Busby Berkeley, took an oath that he would never make the audience feel that it was in the clouds by watching overhead-shots of supercolossal dance routines, but his morale has weakened, and he will shoot from a skyscraper angle, a dance ensemble featuring elephants instead of sunkist beauties.

Mary Nash of Stage Signs for Film

Mary Nash, noted New York stage actress and star of many a Broadway production, has been signed for an important role in "Uncertain Lady," now in production with Edward Everett Horton and Genevieve Tobin co-featured. A few years ago Miss Nash scored a success in "The Command to Love," which Universal later made into a picture under the title, "Boudoir Diplomat."

THE COLD FACTS ABOUT COLDS!

What a Cold is and What is Required for Relief

Clearing Up a Subject on Which Much Misinformation Has Been Promulgated!

EVERY YEAR colds take a heavy toll in health, time and money. As a result of the prevalence of colds, much misinformation on the subject of colds has been spread about. There are so many "cures" for colds now that one wonders if there is anything good for anything else.

All kinds of self-appointed experts tell you what to do for a cold. Some tell you to soak your feet. Others tell you to fill your head with vapors. Still others tell you to wash your mouth and gargle. Still others advise chest rubs. Between them all you would be doing everything but painting yourself.

The joke of it—or rather the tragedy of it—is that these measures for the most part are like trying to cure dandruff by clipping the hair. They just don't reach the seat of the trouble.

An Internal Infection That May End in Flu!

It is well to remember what a cold is. A cold is an infection produced within the system by a germ, a germ so small that it will pass through the finest filter and hence it is easily spread. A cold, in other words, is an internal infection that may pave the way for other diseases, including flu.

A cold, therefore, plainly calls for internal treatment.

A cold also is something of a definite condition. Relief calls for certain definite effects. How, then, can a preparation that's good for half a dozen things besides colds be equally effective for colds? Yet medicines that are good for neuritis, toothaches, halitosis, dandruff, etc., seven months of the year suddenly blossom out as cold remedies during the winter months! If there is anything that common sense dictates, it is a cold remedy for a cold.

The Four Effects Called For

Obviously, to get rid of a cold you must kill the infection within the system and drive out the poisonous matter it has created.

That calls for a remedy that will do certain definite things.

The remedy called for is Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine because it does the four things necessary.

First, it opens the bowels, gently but thoroughly, the first step in expelling a cold.

Second, it combats the cold germs and fever in the system.

Third, it relieves the headache and grippy feeling.

Safe to Take!

Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine contains nothing harmful and is absolutely safe to take. For more than forty years it has been the standard cold and grippe tablet of the world, the formula always keeping pace with Modern Medicine.

Every drug store in America sells Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine, 30c and 50c. Good dealers won't try to talk you into something else for the sake of a few pennies more profit.

When a cold threatens, play the part of wisdom. Don't wait or waste time with makeshift methods, but get a package of Grove's Laxative Bromo Quinine and start taking the tablets immediately. Taken in time they will usually expel a cold overnight and that's the action required for safety.

A NAME you can trust means a product you can trust!

In addition to the name Fleischmann (which in itself is a guarantee of quality) you will find on the Fleischmann bottle two other great names: Penn-Maryland Company, Inc. as sole distributor; and National Distillers as sponsors. Under the auspices of these names you can surely buy with confidence.

THERE is much discussion these days as to what should be printed on the label of a liquor bottle. It is our belief that the most important information on any label is the name of the maker. In buying gin especially, a name you can trust means a product you can trust!

The Fleischmann Company needs no introduction to the American public. Its fame is international, its integrity beyond question. Since 1870, the name Fleischmann on a bottle of gin has been a guarantee of quality unsurpassed. Millions of dollars have been spent in perfecting the distilling processes and equipment now in operation at the great Fleischmann plant. Master distillers who learned their art in the Old World are in charge. Only the finest American grains are used. And—what is most important—from the initial selection of grains to the final bottling, every phase of production takes place in one plant, under one control.

Fleischmann's Gin is not synthetic, not mixed—it is FOUR TIMES DISTILLED to achieve greater purity and superior smoothness. Insist on Fleischmann's. It's worth the difference! Served at most of the smart places—and sold at all licensed dealers.

JAMES J. LONG'S SPORTS COMMENT

McGraw Maker of Pilots. Produces 16 Managers. Six Now in Senior Loop.

Malone Likes New Ball. Primo Not Getting Rich. Hockey in Poor Hands.

A glance around the major league baseball circuits reveals that the late John J. McGraw assured the continuance of his managerial system in part by leaving a surprising number of his former pupils to carry it on in the capacity of pilots. Just as Notre Dame, under Knute Rockne, produced a record-breaking string of football coaches, the New York club under McGraw appears to have been a school for baseball managers. No fewer than six of the present eight managers in the National League once played as Giants under McGraw's direction, and with one other in the American League, a total of seven skippers among the 16 now serving in the majors may be termed McGrawian products.

George Gibson

Our own George Gibson served two years under McGraw as a coach and reserve catcher after the Pittsburgh club released him in 1916. Bill McKechnie, of the Braves, joined the Giants in 1916 after the Federal League disbanded and played third base until July 20, when he was traded with Christy Mathewson and Eddie Roush to the Reds for Buck Herzog and Wade Killefer.

TOTAL OF SIXTEEN MANAGERS PRODUCED

Bob O'Farrell, now leader of the Reds, was in five pennant races under McGraw as a Giant catcher. Casey Stengel, of the Dodgers, served in the New York outfield for several years. Bill Terry, of the Giants, and Frankie Frisch, of the Cardinals, played their first major league games in McGraw's New York lineup. The American League's managerial representative of the McGraw system is Rogers Hornsby, who was the Giants' second baseman in 1927.

Others who became big league managers after playing under McGraw, were Christy Mathewson, Roger Bresnahan, Wilbert Robinson, Bill Dahlen, Frank Bowerman, Buck Herzog, Dave Bancroft, Arthur Fletcher and Billy Southworth. In all, McGraw produced 16 managers.

MALONE LATEST TO SEE AID IN NEW BALL

One more pitcher sees the National League's new ball as a probable help rather than a hindrance to him in his mound efforts this year. Pat Malone, who was on the ragged edge as a Cub this winter and was retained only because several attempts to trade him were unsuccessful, thinks the livelier ball is going to put him right back on the winning road, and his confidence is shared by a number of his teammates.

Pat Malone

In a general sense, the new pellet is figured as an advantage for the hitters. But some pitchers, the players say, will do better with the 1934 sphere because it is lower seamed. The old ridge-seamed ball gave a sharper break to a curve, but it is contended that certain pitchers, like Malone, will be helped by the new one because the low seam will assist them in letting go of it. Pat asserts that the high-seamed ball of the last two years was a handicap to him. Whether or not that was the cause, it is certain that his record took a turn for the worse in those two campaigns. In his first Cub year, 1928, he won 18 and lost 13 games; in 1929, he won 22 and lost 10; in 1930, he won 20 and lost 9, and in 1931, he won 16 and lost 9. Then, for the first time, he fell below the .500 mark, losing 17 games against 15 wins in 1932, and losing 14 while winning only 10 last year.

HEAVY TITLE NOT GOLD MINE FOR CARNERA

A few years ago the world heavyweight fistic championship was estimated to be worth a million dollars to the holder. He might get comparatively little for the challenger's end in winning it, but once in possession of the crown he could count on seven figures in ultimate returns. First there would be fat pickups on theatrical contracts, barnstorming tours and other side lines, and then, even if defeated in his first defense of the title, the champion would be sure of at least 37½ per cent of the receipts, amounting to something around half a million. If he won his first fight as champion and retained the diadem, he could look ahead to at least that much more in a second defense.

But that was in the days of million-dollar gates, which are now only a memory. The championship has proved anything but a gold mine for Primo Carnera. He received only about $18,000, if anything, for winning the title when Jack Sharkey obligingly left his chin where Carnera could reach it with an uppercut, punching power that Primo never showed before or since. For beating old Paulino Uzcudun in Italy, the

BASEBALL'S GREATEST STAR ENTERS HIS 21st SEASON FULL OF HOPE

To Play in at Least 100 Games, Ruth's Goal; Legs Are Strong and He Prays They'll Hold Out

By BABE RUTH.

I have often hard that the years fly by rapidly as we grow older, and that fact has come home to me forcibly during the past two or three years. It seems only a month or so since I was watching the Giants win the World Series from the Senators. Yet here we are with another baseball season around the corner.

It is an important season for me, I know. If I figured the outlook merely on the way I feel I would say without hesitation that I would play far more than 100 games. I would predict that I would play more this year than in 1933. I really hope I can. But I can't forget that I am older than most players are when they have to say goodby to the game, so I am making no predictions.

Babe Ruth

My legs feel good and I am satisfied that they will hold out in good shape until midseason. It is in the heat of summer that the grind begins to tell. It is true that warm weather is needed to loosen up the muscles, but there is such a thing as hot weather. Too much of that burns up a player's energy and slows him down.

TWENTY-FIRST SEASON IN MAJORS

This will be my twenty-first season in the big leagues, counting the 1914 season, when I played a few games with the Red Sox. This is the twentieth time I have come South to a big league training camp. I have been fortunate that my legs have held out to permit me to play so long, and I take this occasion to recommend my program to other ball players

Perhaps I might have lasted as long in the big leagues without this winter exercising. But I doubt it. I think the time I have spent in Artie McGovern's gymnasium in New York, and the golf I have played during the off-season, furnish the answer for my long stay as a big league player. I believe any player who takes proper exercise during the months between the world series and the training trip will profit by it.

So I am looking forward hopefully for a successful season. I am not starting with the idea of merely playing 100 games and then stepping down to the dugout. I plan to stay in action as long as I am able to play ball, and I would like to play in every game.

Is this my last season? That's hard to say. I am quite convinced, though, that it will be no easy matter to give up the thrills which come from getting base hits, catching flies in the outfield, throwing out runners on the base paths.

HOPES TO CARRY ON—WILL KEEP HAND IN GAME

I take it that this question, "Is this my last season?" refers to the active playing because I do not expect to step out entirely. I still have ambitions to be a big league manager before I say farewell to the game.

I am quite content to go along as a private in the ranks as long as I am able to play with some regularity. In fact, I am convinced I am better off to work on that program.

I hope to hit a lot more homers and play a lot more games. But I notice that Urban Faber has left the majors and Eppa Rixey is gone. The old guard is thinning. I notice it, too, in our own club. When I first joined the Yankees several players were my age or older. Most of them have gone out of baseball. During the winter, Herb Pennock was sent to Boston and now only George Uhle and myself, of the present Yanks, are past 31.

But I really feel younger than I know I am. I merely wonder how long I will continue to feel that way.

GOMEZ SIGNS WITH YANKS

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla., March 7.—(AP.)—Vernon Gomez, pitching mainstay of the New York Yankees, has signed his contract and reduced the holdouts among the regulars to four.

Gomez said he had signed a one-year contract and a better one than he had last season. This was interpreted to mean that Lefty had received what he wanted rather than that he had received a raise.

The holdouts now include only Danny MacFayden, Bill Dickey, Frank Crosetti and Lyn Lary among the regulars.

Baseball Briefs

FORT MYERS, Fla.—(AP.)—If the Philadelphia Athletics fail to make a good showing against the New York Giants in their opening exhibition game Friday it won't be because Manager Connie Mack didn't work them hard enough. The American League club's regulars and the vanfigans played a regulation nine-inning game yesterday, with the veterans clinching a 6-to-3 victory in the eighth.

SARASOTA, Fla.—(AP.)—After two days of practice, Manager Bucky Harris has claimed the American League pennant for his Boston Red Sox. The new pilot explained that he based his predictions not on what he has seen his veterans do in the training camp, which has been very little, but on what they have told him during the many heart-to-heart conferences he has had with his players.

MIAMI BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—Manager Bill Terry isn't worrying so much about the illness of Gus Mancuso, now slowly recovering from an attack of typhoid fever. Although Mancuso probably won't be in shape to start the season, Terry already has found an acceptable substitute in Paul Richards. The youngster has handled himself well in practice and has been nominated for first string duty until Mancuso returns.

ST. PETERSBURG, Fla.—(AP.)—Fears that Ed Brandt was a holdout were dispelled when the big southpaw motored into the Boston Braves' camp, two days late. He said a heavy storm in the Northwest delayed his journey from his Spokane, Wash., home.

BRADENTON, Fla.—James (Rip) Collins, the Cardinals' first baseman, has arrived in camp, leaving Shortstop Leo Durocher as the only infielder missing from the Redbird training camp. Durocher is expected soon. The Cardinals went through two long workouts under a blazing sun.

TAMPA, Fla.—(AP.)—A scrub game of seven innings between adherents of Manager Bob O'Farrell and Coach Burt Shotten relieved the monotony of training for the Cincinnati Reds yesterday. The O'Farrels, with an all-catcher infield, won, 6 to 1.

ORLANDO, Fla.—(AP.)—Two more Brooklyn Dodger holdouts have capitulated, leaving only four unsigned. Chick Outen, second-string catcher, and Pitcher Walter Beck are the latest athletes who have come to terms. Still unsatisfied are Al Lopez, Hack Wilson, Ray Benge and Jimmy Jordan.

LUTHERANS WIN OVER GENEVA

GREENVILLE, Pa., March 7.—(AP.)—Thiel wound up its basketball season last night with a thrilling 41-to-39 victory over Geneva in a Tri-State Conference clash that went into an overtime period.

The Greenville team led until the last 30 seconds when Grahame, veteran Geneva guard, sank a goal from mid-court to tie the score, at 35-35. Thiel dropped in two goals and two fouls in the overtime period to settle the issue. The lineup:

SPOTOVICH, CZLAPINSKI STAR AS SOUTH RETAINS TITLE

PERRY BEATEN SECOND TIME, 35 TO 23

By JULIUS LEVIN

The South High School Orioles have been returned to the office of scholastic basketball champions of Pittsburgh with an overwhelming majority and upon their shoulders has been placed the task of representing Pa Pitt in the P. I. A. A. eliminations for the state title for the second succession year.

A plucky Perry High School quintet, standard-bearer of Section II of the City League for the second straight year, fought itself out in a vain attempt to shatter an Oriole winning streak that now has been extended to 28 in a row and went down to a crushing defeat in the second and deciding battle of the playoff series for the crown in the Pitt Stadium pavilion yesterday, 35-23. Thus the South Siders completed their second season in the City League with the laurels safely in their grasp and their record over that period of time, free from defeat at the hands of a local opponent.

SPOTOVICH LEADS WAY

Eddie Spotovich, without a doubt the greatest center to perform in the City League in years, aided by Eddie (Slip) Czlapinski, as fine a guard as could be found in this section of the state, provided the fireworks in the deciding struggle that blasted all hopes of the North Siders to force the series into a third contest.

Spotovich, playing the pivot in a manner that reminds local fans of the incomparable Dutch Dehnert, of the Rosies-Celtics, split the cords with field goals no less than eight times and added three perfect shots from the charity line to carry off the scoring honors with 19 points.

Spotty, however, was not alone in receiving the plaudits of the fans. Czlapinski, Oriole guard, who invariably sacrifices all opportunities to score to feed the sharpshooters of the team, was the boy who gave Spotovich most of his chances to ring up points. Besides his accurate passes to his center mate, Czlapinski muzzled the scoring activities of Bob Kornick, leading point-getter in Section II during the past two seasons. Kornick was held to a solitary foul and even that point couldn't be charged against Czlapinski, Spotovich being the guilty one in that particular instance.

PERRY WEAKENS

The Perry passers, defeated in the first game, 33-27, tried hard to make a comeback, but after keeping abreast of the Orioles in the first two periods, weakened in the last two stanzas and were gasping for breath as the South Siders, displaying a burst of speed, rapidly piled up points to assure themselves of the title.

The victory gives South possession of the Fintex Trophy, emblematic of the City League championship, and, also earns it the right to represent District VIII in the P. I. A. A. playoffs for the state championship.

Scholastic fans in the Greater Pittsburgh district saw their first game in the current W. P. I. A. L. elimination series in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion last night when a speedy and shifty New Kensington High quintet, perennial champion of Section I, made short work of Ford City High School, champion of Section VI for the seventh straight year, 33 to 20.

Off in its shooting, New Kensington took the lead at the start and was never headed by the boys from Armstrong County. In only one period, the third, was Ford City able to outscore Carl Glock's smooth-working machine, the Campbell-coached quintet bagging eight markers to New Kensington's six. The Allegheny Valley five, however, rang up 11 points in the final period to sew up the game. Eddie Waugh, scoring ace of New Kensington, who was expected to lead the attack, failed to get a single point, but Jean-

CITY LEAGUE CLUBS MEET

By TOM BIRKS

Hopeful of banding together a six-club circuit, the sponsors of the City Baseball League will hold their first organization meeting tonight at Books. Everett Sweeny, president of the league, will preside.

Unlike previous seasons when 12 or more clubs sought franchises in the circuit, only three teams are assured of berths. Books, the defending champions, will be back and Homewood-Brushton and Dormont are certain to be represented.

Billy Fuchs and George Falconer again will be in charge of the Dormont club, while Bill Dalzell will be manager of the Homewood-Brushton aggregation. The Homewood-Brushton Boosters' Association is arranging plans for its annual boxing show in Motor Square Garden to raise funds to outfit the team.

The Pittsburgh Independents, composed of players from the Crafton-Ingram Church League and playing at Idlewild, and Brentwood may seek membership in the league.

Another prospect is Mt. Oliver, where the Businessmen's Association has started a movement to sponsor a strong club. A representative from that organization is expected to attend tonight's meeting.

MUSHERS TO MEET

The West View Church Mushers League will meet tomorrow in the West View Presbyterian Church at 8 o'clock. Invitations have been extended First Presbyterian Church, St. Lukes, Mt. Calvary, St. Athanasius, Methodist Episcopal and United Presbyterian to enroll teams.

WELKER COCHRAN

A former world billiard champion and the secretary of the Pittsburgh Bowling Association share honors as the guest speakers of the Trained Seals of the Sports Department of the Pittsburgh Sun-Telegraph in their weekly radio program over WCAE at 6 o'clock tonight.

Welker Cochran is the erstwhile billiard champion, a former holder of the 18.1 and 18.2 balk line and three-cushions championships. He is playing Johnny Clinton, local star, in a week-long balk line match at the William Penn Parlors, Smithfield street.

Arthur A. (Art) Ober is the bowling executive. He is the manage of the tri-state tenpin tournament, which will be rolled on the Auditorium alleys in the East End next week, and will have a message for the entrants in this competition and also will talk on the sport generally.

Dalcherone to Box Burrows at Garden

General Burrows, Negro middleweigh, of Aliquippa, sparring mate of Ted Yarosz, who has copied the latter's style to perfection, will box one of the six-round preliminaries to the Charley Massera-Reds Barry bout at Motor Square Garden next Monday night, Matchmaker Lew Raymond announced today. His opponent will be Jack Dalcherone, of Springdale, who served as the opponent of Al Quaill, Brookline star, in the latter's recent debut as a professional.

Anson Green, Homestead Negro middleweight, boxes Tommy Rios, of Wilmington, Del., in the first 10-round bout of Monday's bill.

Baseball Briefs

WEST PALM BEACH, Fla.—(AP.)—The fast work of young Harland Clift at third base and the long-range hitting of big George Punchinelli, one-time Cardinal, brought praise from Manager Rogers Hornsby of the St. Louis Browns, today. Sam West, veteran outfielder, has agreed to terms, but First Baseman Irving Burns and Catcher Frank Grube, remain among the unsigned, although both are at the camp.

BILOXI, Miss.—(AP.)—Cecil Travis, flashy 20-year-old utility infielder for the Washington Senators last year, is being groomed to take over the third base job held for years by Ossie Bluege. The holdout problem of Manager Joe Cronin was made easier today when Pitchers Earl Whitehill and Bob Burke came into the fold. This leaves Catcher Cliff Bolton as the only regular who has not signed.

TONIGHT'S FIGHTS

Johnny Pena vs. Bobby Gray, 10 rounds, Oakland, Cal.

Pittsburgh is to enter a hockey team in the Eastern Amateur League next season, it was learned today. The team will be made up of the leading performers in the City Hockey League, and games will be played at Duquesne Garden. Hershey, to be met by the league All-Stars here Monday, is one of the strongest teams in the eastern loop.

The City League today accepted an invitation to enter a team in the national hockey championships, to be staged in Madison Square Garden, New York, March 23, 24 and 25. The league skaters who will represent Pittsburgh in the championships will be selected by Steve Cox, league official, tonight.

The J. Scott Morgans are to oppose Carnegie Tech in a league game at the Garden tonight. Despite the fact that two of their stars are out of the lineup, the Morgans figure to down the Tartans and set the stage for their championship game with the Pirates next week.

Frank Tyson, who had to have three stitches placed in his chin to close a cut he sustained in the Morgan-Ravens game last week, is to be replaced by Battaglio at a defense point, and Cal Dort, one of the Morgan's forwards, is ill with pneumonia. Dort, unable to appear in any more games this season, is to be replaced by Lovett or Brown. The probable lineup:

Morgans—		Tech—
Scully	G.	Adamson
McSorley	D.	Dubin
Battaglio	D.	Wicks
R. Schooley	C.	Bell
Powell	W.	Jerge
B. Schooley	W.	Allies

Morgan spares—Lovett, Jeffries and Brown.

SPORT VIGNETTES

T. E. Sharp, an editorial page columnist in the Mobile Times, writes the following:

You were aware of him the minute he entered the smoking room.

Trim figure under broad shoulders, good chin, a boyish front of face firm in determination, alert eyes.

So I did.

"College boy?"

"Opelika?"

"That's our shopping town. We live eight miles out from Lafayette, near White Plains."

"Where'd you get that deep coat of tan in winter time?"

"Been running a caterpillar tractor all winter—except bad days. Dad has a thousand acres to plow. Bad days we hunt. We have 20 hunting dogs."

"The tractor firm sent a photographer out to get a picture of my brother and me."

"Only in winter. Dad insists that all of his nine children, including us married ones, spend the winter near him."

A pause. Then:

"I always dread this trip to California. I don't like to ride a train . . . and I'll be riding one all summer."

"What's your business?"

"Catcher."

"Baseball catcher! What team? And who are you?"

"I'm Charley Finney's son. I've been with Pittsburgh in the National League for five years, and I'm Howard Wilson Finney. My brother is an outfielder with the Philadelphia Athletics."

Dr. Edward J. (Eddie) O'Brien, of Boston, one of the real veterans among the football officials, has announced his retirement from the arduous task of galloping up and down the field in the wake of these modern long-running and long-forward passing teams—again—but the boys down east are betting he will be back in harness—again—when the bugle calls for the start of another season . . . He first announced his retirement in 1930, but he was on the job as late as the Princeton-Yale game last December 2 . . . He has been officiating for a quarter of a century, and many are the interesting tales of the gridiron he could spin.

Dick Harlow, former Penn State coach, later at Colgate and Western Maryland, will teach the art of football scouting at a summer school to be conducted at Northeastern University in Boston . . . Other instructors signed for the clinics are Fritz Crisler, of Princeton; Harry Kipke, of Michigan, and Joe Donchess, former star Pitt end, who will be a coach at Dartmouth next fall.

Leo Houck, Penn State boxing coach, is authority for the statement that the story that Steve Hamas, the former State football player, and now a heavyweight championship boxing contender, is handicapped by an old football injury is a myth, nothing less . . . He was Steve's boxing coach in college and also trainer of the football team and says that when Hamas left State he was sound in every sense of the word and he has kept in touch with him ever since and to his knowledge Steve is not handicapped by any injury, especially by "football legs."

The fifty-sixth six-day bicycle race in Madison Square Garden, New York, last week, attracted 125,000 persons, despite a three-day blizzard, which gives some idea of the grip the sport which is to be revived here soon has on some communities. . . .The winning team and another one sailed immediately afterward to take part in a similar event in Paris next week. . . . Thirty thousand dollars was distributed as prize money to the contestants, with the winners getting approximately $5,000.—HARRY KECK.

GAME TOMORROW

Chicago White Sox at Pittsburgh.

By CARL W. SHATTO

While Larry Welch, manager of the local entry in the American and International Lacrosse Association, is heading toward Chicago and Detroit with the aim of putting over a four-cornered trade in which Pittsburgh will get Chuck Davidson and Roddy Clarke, two of the aces of the Chicago Whitesox, the Yellow Jackets today are resting and trying to figure out how they can conquer Misters Davidson and Clarke and their mates when they meet them here tomorrow night.

And while they are resting, the Jackets are attempting to recover from a fine assortment of cuts and bruises which they were handed as they downed the Detroit Tigers, 15 to 9, before some 2,500 fans at Motor Square Garden last night. Harry LaFrance, who was knocked cold when Starling socked him on the head with his stick in the fourth period, is sporting a face so badly peeled that it resembles a raw beefstake; Ty Silk is trying to reduce a bad swelling in his "trick" knee, and Claude Jennings is striving to reduce the soreness in a few badly bruised ribs.

This would be woe enough for a team confronted with a battle with Kelly DeGray's wild warriors, but the locals have even more. Albert Vincent, the Jackets' leading scorer, left yesterday for his home in Montreal, where his wife is critically ill, and will not return until next week or possibly later. Last night's lineup:

ARKY VAUGHAN NOT YET IN BUC FOLD

PASO ROBLES, Cal., March 7.—With the infielders and outfielders due to report to Manager George Gibson, of the Pittsburgh Pirates, at the club's spring training camp here by tomorrow, it has become known that Arky Vaughan, youthful shortstop, has not yet signed a contract. Arky is reported to be on his way to camp even now, but unless he gets in today and signs by tomorrow, he must necessarily be classed as a holdout.

Just how far apart Vaughan and the Pirate officials are is not known, but Arky may follow in the footsteps of Larry French, star southpaw pitcher, who capitulated and signed his contract here last Saturday after having balked at the first terms offered him by the Bucs.

JOHNSON TO PITCH

Lloyd Johnson, the lanky southpaw, the tallest and heaviest pitcher on the squad, will get his first test as a Pirate when the Bucs clash with Portland in their opening exhibition game here Sunday. Manager George Gibson announced today that he plans to pitch Johnson, who already is in fine condition, for a few innings along with Larry French and probably Cy Blanton.

After loosening up for several days, the pitchers have begun to cut loose and not a sore arm has been reported. Gibby has made his pitching chart and the twirlers now will take regular turns on the mound for batting practice until the long list of regularly scheduled exhibition games starts March 17 at Riverside.

Elmer Trapp, Wilkinsburg boy, who hopes to win an infield job, has continued his impressive work. He has looked good in batting practice and handled himself well in the field.

With the pitchers rapidly rounding into shape, all will be ready for long sessions of batting practice when the second squad arrives tomorrow. There isn't a serious injury on the squad and nothing worse than a bruise has been reported.

SWIFT REPORTED HERE

Pitcher Bill Swift, of the Pirates, a holdout, was reported in Pittsburgh today prepared to go to the training camp in California, but he had not contacted the club headquarters and could not be located at any of the hotels.

By JESS CARVER

That steady pitter-patter and swish, swish you may, or may not, have heard last evening, wasn't rain. At least it wasn't the rain that makes the flowers bloom and the feet wet. It was the rain of field goals from the accurate hands of West Virginia and Duquesne University basketball heroes as they swamped the Carnegie Tech and Wash-Jeff passers under a deluge of goals here and at Washington, Pa.

West Virginia, a sorry-looking aggregation in its previous local appearances against Pitt and the Dukes, walloped the Tartans, 37 to 12 in the Tartan gymnasium. The Mountaineers treated the Plaid even more shamefully during the first half than did the Dukes last week. The Dukes gave Tech three points in the first half; West Virginia permitted the home towners only two. Brad Edelbut caging a field goal five minutes after the start of hostilities (?) to prevent a shutout.

STYDAHAR STARS

Joe Stydahar, Mountaineer center, led the attack of the West Virginians against the Plaid with six field goals and three fouls. Paul Gibson was Tech's big shot with two field buckets and two fouls. The score at the end of the half favored West Virginia by 19 to 2. The victory was West Virginia's sixth out of eight starts in the Intercollegiate Conference and was Tech's eleventh setback in 15 games.

In the prelim, Tech's plebes knocked off Dormont High School's passers, 39 to 25. The lineups:

EASY FOR DUKES

At Washington, the Dukes fooled around for a minute or so of action and then went to town against the Prexies. The final score was 65 to 34, the wonder being that the Prexies harvested as many points as they did.

Paul Birch led the Duquesne scoring with a half dozen tosses from the floor and as many from the foul line for a total of 18 points. Irv Brenner had 14 and Art Feldman 12. Maury Leiber picked up five and five for 15.

In the preliminary, the Duquesne freshmen rolled over the Wash-Jeff yearlings, 58 to 27. The lineups:

DUKES MEET FLANAGAN

Spring football practice will get under way at Duquesne next Monday, provided the weather is propitious. The new Duquesne coaches, Joe Bach and Christy Flanagan, called the Red and Blue varsity squad together yesterday, planning to hold an initial drill, but the recent rain and snow was found to have done the Bluff gridiron little, if any, good, so the workouts were postponed.

SPORTS COMMENT

Man Mountain got little more than a citation from Mussolini, who gave the receipts to charity, and for his decision over Tommy Loughran last week in Miami the titleholder's share did not exceed $15,000. The manipulators who expected to get rich on Carnera haven't made much progress so far.

HOCKEY HELD TO NEED SOME LIVE WIRES

By the year Pittsburgh gets back into major league hockey the big-time game may be in the doldrums unless early steps are taken to remedy present conditions. At least, that's the conclusion to be drawn from the criticism now being aimed at the magnates by James A. Burchard and other experts around the circuit. They feel that hockey is making the same mistake baseball has made in letting franchises get into the hands of owners who are not practical men in the sport, and allowing the teams to be directed by colorless managers. It is argued that the game needs more leaders like Lester Patrick, Connie Smythe and Tommy Gorman, who know hockey and how to keep interest aroused.

Lester Patrick

Most of the powers behind the sticks fail to appreciate the possibilities of their million-dollar toy, the critics assert. Instead of working together to boom their product, they bicker, squabble and otherwise menace the golden goose. Young players are not boosted or advertised for fear they will demand more money. No attempt is made to find and build up outstanding new talent. The owners and managers with few exceptions are total strangers to the requisites of professional sport. In other words, they don't know how to peddle their fish. They need some Barnums. The game is allowed to carry itself, which it cannot do forever, as the present-day youngsters lack the fire and magnetism of the old-timers and no provision is being made for the replacing of the Morenzes, Stewarts, Shores, Johnsons, Clanceys and Cooks when they have reached the end of their careers.

SOUTH RETAINS CITY CROWN

nette, his running mate, and Ross, at guard, came through nobly to keep their team among the eight survivors in the running for the W. P. I. A. L. title and the District VII crown in the P. I. A. A. competition. Jeannette made five baskets and two fouls for 12 points, while Ross confined his scoring to field goals alone, sinking seven of them.

UNIONTOWN NEXT FOE

As a result of their victory, the Glockmen earned the right to meet Uniontown, champion of Section XI, in a quarter-final engagement in the Pitt Stadium Pavilion Saturday night.

The scene in the W. P. I. A. L. tournament moves to Washington High School tomorrow when Scott High, of North Braddock, champion of Section VIII and former state titleholder, meets Mapletown, champion of Section XIII, in the opening contest of the quarter-finals.

The contest marks the third for Mapletown, which already has accounted for the demise of East Pike Run, Section XVI, and Monongahela, Section V. Scott, granted a bye in the first round, easily defeated Latrobe, of Section X, in the second round, 41-26. The Scott-Mapletown winner enters the semi-finals.

North Braddock Junior High School, champion of Section II, of the Junior W. P. I. A. L., qualified to meet the winner of today's Charleroi-Ellsworth game at Charleroi for the title last night by defeating East McKeesport, champion of Section III, 33-15, on the Scott High School floor.

Charleroi, champion of Section I, is the favorite to defeat Ellsworth, champion of Section IV, inasmuch as the Cougar Juniors already have defeated the Cokers in two pre-season games. The final likely will be staged at Charleroi next Tuesday.

In the Pittsburgh Grade School eliminations, Beechwood plays Oakwood this afternoon in the Boggs Avenue school. The lineups of yesterday's games:

Class A Playoffs

By PAUL G. SULLIVAN

Dick Koubek's Keystone A. C. handballers have been ordered to vigorous workouts throughout the current week in preparation for their vital class A playoff struggle with the champion Y. M. C. A. crew on the Downtown Y. M. C. A. courts Saturday. The Keystoners hold a small but important edge over the titleholders by virtue of a 4-to-1 win over the Y. M. C. A. troupe in the inaugural match of the series, designed to crack a three-way deadlock at the close of the regular league campaign.

Meanwhile the P. A. A. intramural handicap glove event moves ahead toward the latter brackets. The four favorites, Club Champion Harry Kraeling, Jr., Al Bialas, Bill Kern and Vin McGuinness, remain very much in the chase with McGuinness leading the way to the semi-finals through impressive victories over Eddie Roche, Tom Heyward and Henry Isaly.

Competition in the annual city class B squash racquets title tourney will be resumed late this afternoon as Bob Lampus, home club star, engages the writer in the lone third round tilt remaining on the card. The survivor of today's melee will encounter Bob Flannery, Winged Head contender, in the quarter-finals Friday. Other tussels in the round of eight will be reeled off the same day in conjunction with initial sessions of the professional exhibition affair in which National Champion Jack Summers, of Boston, meets Ben Pope, crack Keystone mentor. Results of the P. A. A. matches:

UNWISE TO VEST TARIFF POWER IN INDIVIDUAL

By LEWIS HANEY

Professor of Economics, New York University

NEW YORK, March 7.—The President has come forward with another demand for unrestrained executive power. He now asks Congress to bestow upon him its power over tariffs—the power to modify duties and other import restrictions.

The only limitations in the proposed bill are (1) that he cannot change rates more than 50 per cent, nor make shifts between the free and the dutiable lists; and (2) that Congress may in three years repeal the measure.

The background for this proposal is found partly in the agricultural schemes of Secretary Wallace, who has recently argued for tariff reductions in order to enable foreigners to buy our wheat, cotton and tobacco. But probably the demand for it comes partly from a desire to deal with retaliations being adopted against our devaluation of the dollar, which has tended to stimulate our exports.

'EMERGENCY' DOUBTED

Several questions at once arise:

(1) Is this truly an "emergency" measure, as the administration claims? Each fresh grant of sweeping power has been demanded on that ground. As in this case of the stock exchange bill, this one begins with a long argument which refers to an "emergency," states alleged purposes, and proposes to remedy everything from unemployment to a lack of balance among industries.

In his message, the President says that the measure is now opportune and necessary because world trade has declined sharply and has thus made recovery plans difficult. But when was this discovered! The decline has been going on for years, while recently we have been told of improvement.

We can hardly blame some Senators for becoming skeptical about the "emergency" plans, now that we have been so long "on the way."

GIVES EXECUTIVE CLUB

(2) Granting that we need lower tariffs, is this the best way to get results? Why not give the duly authorized tariff commission the necessary power and free it to act more efficiently?

This measure gives the Executive terrific power over particular industries—a veritable club. It may sound reassuring to be told that "no sound and important industry" will be "seriously disturbed." But should any one man be allowed to decide which of our industries is unsound and unimportant? For example, what about the aviation industry?

I note particularly that, despite the language about the emergency, etc., the bill empowers the President to act "whenever he finds that any existing duties or other import restrictions are unduly burdening and restricting the foreign trade of the United States." That leaves practically no limit, and it has nothing to do with unemployment or an "emergency."

PRICE QUESTION

3—How does this tariff reduction scheme fit in with the scheme to raise domestic prices? We should know that the only reason why we do not export wheat, and are losing cotton exports, is that our prices are out of line with world markets. The administration is set to raise prices still higher.

It may be fair to reason that either the contemplated imports will reduce prices in this country, or else they will not be important enough to have any effect on the "emergency" or to warrant a further straining of the Constitution.

I think most economists favor a gradual but distinct moderation of tariff barriers, as I do; but I doubt that such a hasty and sweeping grant of executive power is the best way to do this.

Charge Radio-G.E. Patent Monopoly

TRENTON, N. J., March 7.—(AP.)—The Radio Corporation of America and the General Electric Company are charged with controlling radio patents in violation of anti-trust laws and court decrees in a 65-page answer to patent infringement suits brought by these companies in Federal Court against the Hygrade Sylvania Corporation of Massachusetts, manufacturers of radio tubes.

The answer, which amended a previous answer, was filed yesterday by former Federal Judge Hugh Morris, of Delaware, representing the Hygrade concern.

Van Sweringens' Future Hinges on Recovery

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP.)—The future of the brothers Van Sweringen hinges, in the opinion of Wall street bankers, on recovery in railway earnings and real estate.

The one-time Cleveland newsboys, who rose to the financial zenith by spectacular acquisition of a vast railroad and real estate empire, are in the spotlight again because of a report—which turned out to be erroneous—that they had defaulted on $40,000,000 they owe the J. P. Morgan banking group.

This would have meant that control of the rail system, which covers much of the continent, would have passed to Wall street. Authoritative information in the financial section is that the loans actually are not in default and that the brothers—O. P. and M. J.—still control the bulk of the $2,000,000,000 in railroads and real estate which they drew into their domain between 1916 and 1930.

R. C. Page, chairman of a bondholders' protective committee which filed a statement with the Federal Trade Commission calling the $40,000,000 loans in default, said yesterday:

"The committee was informed that the interest on the two loans was overdue, and the statement made by the committee that the loans were in default was based on this information. I have now learned that the information was incorrect in this respect."

It was learned the Morgan banking group is still standing by the Van Sweringens and that it has accepted notes instead of cash.

One banker said:

"The loan definitely is not in default. A loan is not in default until a lender has demanded payment and payment has been refused. That has not happened in this case."

STOCKS MOVE IN NARROW GROOVE

NEW YORK, March 7.—Financial markets side-stepped slowly again today and most of the time there was only a faint murmur of the speculative pulse.

The activity in stocks was around the low level of yesterday. Trading circles apparently were waiting for an impulse from Washington or elsewhere. Indecision was in the air. There were few enthusiastic buyers and a scarcity of urgent sellers. Fractional changes were the rule, although there were a few soft spots.

Grains were almost at a standstill, but cotton improved. Rubber futures edged up to a new high since last July. Silver was somewhat heavy. Dollar rates were narrow. There was a revival of rumors that America, England and France were operating a secret currency stabilization agreement. Bonds were fairly steady.

Some of the alcohol shares improved, United States Industrial, Schenley, American Commercial and National Distillers getting up fractions to about a point. The Alleghany Corporation issues, depressed in the previous session, recovered some of their losses. American Telephone, United States Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Case and some others were virtually unchanged. A few specialties firmed. The utilities and rails did nothing. The tobaccos were heavy, American B losing 3 points and Reynolds B 1.

On the optimistic side of the ledger were reports of continued gains in steel production, electric power output, freight car loadings, retail sales and corporation earnings.

At the same time, the market had to consider the threatened labor troubles in the automotive field; probabilities of a substantial paring of business and industrial profits if the administration's shorter hours-higher wages program becomes effective, and the movement for federal regulation of security exchanges.

Some hopes were expressed that the strike problem of the motor companies might be settled through governmental mediation. The union employes of the Fisher Body plant at Flint, Mich., recalled their strike order, which was to have brought a walkout this morning, after word had been received that their case would be heard by the National Labor Board.

In the meantime, however, there were other labor situations that presented difficulties. At Toledo about 500 of the 800 employes of the Toledo Machine and Tool Company plant went on strike. This company manufactures large presses and tools for automobile companies.

In some quarters it was believed that the administration authorities would enforce the plan for increased pay and decreased working time if industry fails to take the initiative. On the other hand, various financial commentators felt that the proposed changes might not be too severe and price compensations would be permitted to partly offset the necessary shading of earnings.

There was much interest shown in Washington reports that the President had said he expected Congress to pass the stock exchange regulation legislation in some form before adjournment. Wall street had almost come to the conclusion that the bill would not be acted upon this session.

MORE NATIONAL BANKS OPEN

International News Service.

WASHINGTON, March 7. — Additional sums of money in substantial amounts, aimed at the stimulation of commerce and industry, were released during February, when 63 national banks, with $62,953,000 "frozen" and $6,568,000 unrestricted deposits, were licensed by the Treasury Department.

Comptroller of the Currency J. F. T. O'Connor said the February record compared with 69 national banks, with $68,966,000 in "frozen" and $6,983,000 in unrestricted deposits, which were licensed during January. In December 77 banks, with $78,628,703 "frozen" and $4,125,000 unrestricted deposits, were licensed. O'Connor said:

"By the close of business February 28, the number of unlicensed national banks had been reduced to 280, contrasted with 1,446 on March 16, 1933, the first day after the termination of the banking holiday.

"Moreover, 81.5 per cent of the institutions which were still unlicensed at the end of last month had received approved licensed relicensing plans, which means that they can reopen just as soon as these plans are consummated."

CAR LOADINGS INCREASE

NEW YORK, March 7.—(AP.)—New York Central's total loadings last week were 108,379 cars compared with 100,743 the previous week and 77,868 a year ago.

Pennsylvania Railroad system handled 91,692 cars of freight last week against 87,991 the week before and 74,640 a year ago.

WICKED TO BE RIGHT, EVENTS INDICATE

By MERRYLE S. RUKEYSER
Universal Service.

NEW YORK, March 7.—In the current emotionalism, it is apparently a crime to be right.

Mr. Rukeyser

Roll calls have been made recently of executives who succeeded in getting into the high salary brackets and of speculators and investors who had the wit to get out of aviation stocks before the administration impetuously let the ax fall.

Although no evidence was introduced of improper leakage of advance information concerning the cancellation of the air mail contracts, the names of those who sold aviation stocks, either short or for the purpose of actual liquidation, were revealed to the public gaze. Doubtless many uninitiated persons reflected how wicked those sellers were.

GOOD CITIZENS 'WRONG'

By implication, good citizenship required being "wrong" on aviation stocks, which attitude would have been expressed by buying such shares in the interlude before the crash. The vagaries of the moment seem to make heroes only out of suckers and boobs.

In connection with the peace leak investigation, growing out of the peace move in December, 1916, Bernard M. Baruch was interrogated by Senate inquisitors. The sagacious Mr. Baruch demonstrated that he had not acted on "inside" information, but on his own keen interpretation of the inner meaning of published documents. Perhaps in the recent aviation situation, revelations made before the Congressional committee before the actual cancellation of the contracts persuaded some operators with foresight how to proceed marketwise.

SALARIES NOT SHOCKING

The publication of current salaries of leading bank executives was not especially shocking. A competent head of a large New York bank should be worth $100,000 a year, but to earn such a stipend he should do more than imitate a parrot who can say: "Keep liquid." If banking is to degenerate into mere routine purchases of federal obligations, clerks can be substituted.

STEEL OUTPUT SHOWS GAIN

NEW YORK, March 7.—Iron Age says:

"With automobile requirements undiminished and with can manufacturers engaging 75 per cent of the tin plate capacity of the country, the steel industry is getting added support from the railroads and miscellaneous consuming lines. Rail releases have raised output at Chicago, Birmingham and Pittsburgh. Unrelaxed pressure from the motor car trade has lifted operations to 100 per cent at Detroit, giving it the distinction of being the only steel producing center in the country operating at capacity. The Great Lakes plant in that district has been running full for some time and the firing of six open hearths at the Rouge works on Monday put Ford on the same basis.

"Ingot output for the country at large has risen to 49 per cent, or two points above a week ago. The performance of scrap prices is in line with the trend of steel operations and advances at Chicago and Philadelphia have lifted the Iron Age composite for heavy melting steel from $12.75 to $12.92 a gross ton.

"With additional railroad releases in sight and with the prospect of larger awards of public works later on, the outlook is for further expansion of steel output unless labor difficulties grow more serious.

"Steel ingot production in February in terms of daily rate increased 25.3 per cent over January as compared with a gain of 15.1 per cent in pig iron output. February production of pig iron was 1,263,673 tons, or 45,131 tons a day, compared with 1,215,226 tons, or 39,201 tons daily in January. Eighty-nine furnaces were in blast on March 1, a gain of two in the month."

Chickie's Daughter

By ELENORE MEHERIN

For days Pippin was haunted with sad wistful regrets. The old books were closed. The old relations ended. She would enter a new world—the romantic college world. She stood at her window, gazing across sapphire waters and wondering at the dark mystery of the future into which she now felt herself plunging.

Would love come to her? She wanted a wild, great love so terribly. She thought of Kevin and stared, dreaming, at his dark winning face.

Then a touching thing happened. It was her birthday. A package came from Bill. He was far away now. Two months since he had left. But he remembered!

In the package was a letter, a photograph and a bracelet.

Pippin gazed at the blond eager face and saw a sadness on the sweet boy's mouth; a wistful seeking in Bill's eyes. It made her heart full so that she wept a little, yet was glad.

The bracelet was a narrow, delicately carved band set with diamonds and emeralds. The jewels gleamed with little flames against Pippin's skin. They were exquisite—a rapture.

But it was Bill's letter that swept the girl with this strange yearning tumult — this emotion that hurt, yet was sweet. Her first real love letter.

"Pippin, dear:

"You didn't want me to say I love you. You don't want me to write it. But it's your birthday. All day long you'll be in my thoughts. I'll be seeing you each moment as you were so dear and lovely when you let me kiss you goodby. You don't know how blue your eyes are and how gold your hair. There's no other girl in the world who's seventeen today and beautiful as you are.

Two Pictures

"Did you ever feel you were on your knees to another person and wanted to be there? That's the way I feel about you, Pippin. Please, please don't send me back this bracelet. It would mean you don't want to remember the beautiful time we had together. I'm not sending it, Pippin, with any remotest thought of holding you. I send it only for remembrance and because the days we had are precious though there never come the like of them again.

"I didn't ask if you wanted my picture. I can't explain why is seems so important that I should send it. Perhaps in the hope that you'll look at it once in a while, think of me and long to meet again under a summer moon on a high, high hill—We shall, Pippin. You're dear to me. You're very dear. You'll always be. Forever yours,

"Bill."

Pippin dashed a hand across her eyes. She folded the letter and blinked.

After a long while she stole softly to her bureau. She set Bill's picture next to Kevin's and stared a long while at the two faces. Both were young; both had strength. But Bill was all boy; Kevin looked a man. Kevin's eyes laughed, but they had power. They were brave, flashing, imperious eyes that even in a picture made her pulse race — made her remember a day when he came and knelt beside her. She could feel his hands—strong, brown hands, on her arms. She could feel his eyes, teasing, yet tender, touching to her very heart. She looked at his mouth and grew red remembering its sweetness.

Chickie Disapproves

She murmured, aching: "On my knees—glad to be there—" and closed her eyes against Kevin's face.

She felt near to Bill—tender to him. He too, had this lonely hunger pulling on his heart.

Chickie didn't want her to keep the bracelet. It was too costly. It would give the young man false hopes. But Pippin fancied Bill opening her letter with the bracelet returned. How dark and forsaken he would feel—

That night when David was alone, Pippin went to his study: "Don't laugh, Dad. Read this letter and tell me if I should give the bracelet back."

David glanced up with a short, catchy laugh: "Going to let me read your love letter girl?"

He took the bracelet and turned it slowly so that all the beautiful lights gleamed.

Without opening the letter he returned it to Pippin's hand. He said, blinking: "You're right. You can't send it back. Thanks, awfully, for wanting me to read the letter."

"Oh, Dad, I can keep the bracelet? I can write and tell him so?"

She stooped down and gave her father a rapt, fervent kiss, murmuring so that he flushed:

"You old darling! I knew you'd understand!"

In a rush of tenderness and tumult she wrote a long brimming letter. No wonder the poets called it the sweetest story ever told. And he was the first who ever said so thrillingly: "I love you." She would keep the bracelet for remembrance and "because I love you a great deal, Bill dear, in a gentle, yearning way and will love you and want you for a precious friend always . . ."

The lonely lad stopping at a remote South American port read Pippin's letter. The world and all it owned of beauty was his.

LANDING OF WILLIAM PENN AT NEW CASTLE, DEL. (1682) GREETED BY SETTLERS, INDIANS

William Penn, celebrated English Quaker, philanthropist and founder of the colony Pennsylvania, received a charter for it (1681) from King Charles II, indebted £16,000 to Admiral Sir William Penn, father of the colonist.

Penn purchased the territory of present Delaware and parts of New Jersey from the Duke of York to obtain outlet to the sea.

Landing, he made peace with the Indians and paid them for their claims. Pennsylvania had already been settled by Swedes, Dutch and Quakers numbering about 6,000. (United States History)

THE SCHOOL OF ATHENS, PLATO AND ARISTOTLE WITH THEIR DISCIPLES

Plato (Aristocles, 426-347 B. C.), a disciple of Socrates and witness of his death, laid down his teacher's philosophy in writing. Plato's extensive works on philosophy, government, law, education, esthetics greatly influenced Aristotle, the stoic philosophers, Cicero, Plutarch and even Christian fathers. Some of his most outstanding works: Republic, Minos (law), Hipparchus (dealing with love for gain), Hippias (on the beautiful).

His "Republic" offers the ideal government: Men of experience and wisdom should lead; the state be protected by soldiers; rank and file placed according to fitness.

In a beautiful garden near Athens, the "Academia," he taught philosophy publicly and free. Distinguished followers gathered around him. "Philosophers of the Academia" still held sessions eight centuries after the founder's death.

Plato's philosophy is expressed by the word idealism as opposed to realism, materialism or sensationalism, not only in fields of knowledge and speculation, but also in actions of daily life.

HYDROGENATION OF OILS

Vegetable oils (cotton seed, corn, soya, peanut) are "hardened" by addition of less than 1% hydrogen (hydrogenation). Fish and whale oils give hard soaps by similar process. Hydrogenation consists in adding nickel (or some other metal) salt to the oil, heating it and introducing hydrogen. The salt decomposes, giving finely distributed metal acting as catalyst, which is filtered and washed out from the molten mass.

Above: Simple hydrogenator. Oil with nickel salt is introduced at top; hydrogen blown in at bottom; steam coils heat and power-driven paddles agitate mixture. (Chemistry)

LIFE HISTORY OF A MOSS (Chiefly Polytrichum)

Mosses together with liverworts constitute the second phylum (Bryophyta) of the plant kingdom (the first phylum being the Thallus plants). Mosses have first green and leafy sexual generation (gametophyte) alternating with a leafless, spore-bearing second one (sporophyte). The former have distinct stems and leaves, but no roots, veins or flowers; the filamentous outgrowth, rhizoids, are not true roots. The spore-bearing generation is a leafless stem-like plant on top of the leafy one. Importance of mosses: Form carpets in woods, fields, on hillsides, retain moisture. (General Science)

JUMP-SPARK BATTERY IGNITION SYSTEM

Battery furnishes low tension (6 volt) current in the primary winding of induction coil; the breaker interrupts this, causing high tension current in secondary winding connected by distributor to the spark plugs. The resulting spark ignites the explosive mixture in the cylinder. One-cylinder engine ignition (above) needs no distributor.

Condenser (left) intensifies spark by speeding up collapse of magnetic field of coil when breaker interrupts primary current. (Automobile)

EXPLOSION THEORY OF SOLAR SYSTEM

This hypothesis assumes that the parent star of the solar system was subject to electrical forces, which caused a speed-up of its whirl. The star bulged and exploded. One part disappeared; the remaining part became our sun; masses of gases ejected by the explosion became the planets and satellites of our solar system.

Secret Agent X–9 Clue Contest

Woman Aboard Wanted

Clue No. 3—Capt Blake Gets His Woman

In an hour the S. S. Marthinia would be in Havana. Capt. John Blake told himself he must act at once. Federal authorities in New York had advised him it was imperative that he arrest "Queenie" Adamson, notorious jewel thief, wanted there for a $500,000 smuggling job.

So far, his friend, Secret Agent X-9, had failed him, said he was not quite sure that the woman he suspected, the mysterious Lucy Edison, was the clever lady thief! She would get off at Havana and ——

But Secret Agent X-9 was unperturbed. He asked the first mate to fetch the enigmatic and indignant lady passenger and also whispered a few instructions to another of the ship's officers.

When Miss Edison appeared, she was fuming with rage. Told that it would be necessary to ask her a few simple questions, she informed the captain she would not comply and knowing her rights, if detained on board, she would sue the ship's company and cause him to lose his command.

"I will answer nothing," she stormed. "Put me under arrest if you like and face the consequences."

The captain was about to do just that when the youth the captain had allowed up on his bridge and who threw with his right foot extended was brought in.

Secret Agent X-9 asked the boy if he would empty his pockets. The lad smiled, and obeyed. The investigators looked at the articles revealed, articles any young man is likely to carry about—money, a keyring, matches, cigarets and letters.

When the famous sleuth picked up the roll of bills, he handed it to the lad, who promtply stuffed the money in the breast pocket of his jacket.

"Capt. Blake, if you do not allow me to——" screamed Miss Edison.

But the skipper was listening to his friend, Secret Agent X-9, who was whispering:

"Cable the federal authorities in New York at once that we have caught 'Queenie Adamson for them."

WHO WAS "QUEENIE" ADAMSON—

AND HOW DID SECRET AGENT X-9 KNOW?

You Get Used to It

We're just tipping off California and Florida on a healthy Eastern winter.

Theirs is the sunshine and ours the rain. Theirs the orange blossoms and ours the frozen paper flowers. But we wouldn't trade 'em sides for all the Chinamen in the tea district.

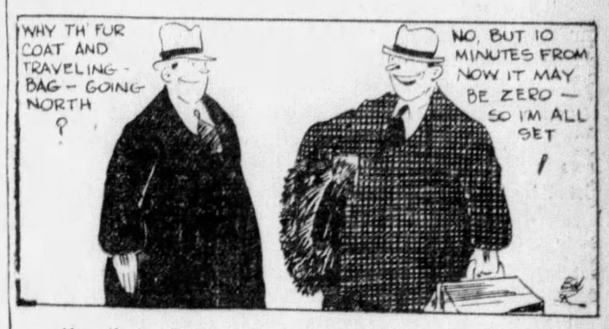
We [illegible] with some snorters this winter. We just want to tell [illegible] day in January.

It was a [illegible] afternoon. The temperature was 60 and only many [illegible] children were playing in the park. The birds were [illegible] pedestrians.

Suddenly there was a cloud no larger than a man's hand. They looked at the sky. And out of the northwest came a well-honed zephyr. The thermometer sucked in its breath and started south like the stock market some years ago.

Inside of eight minutes it shuffled 10 points. Then down to 30, 20 and 10. At five, the weather was on margin.

By twilight, zero was all over the place. And, at two below, the weather bureau was wiped out and went into the capacious mitts of the receivers.



Now, that's what we call elastic climate. It took the temperature off the big board. All inside an hour. If variety is the spice of life, we will take mustard. And we will take it in the shape of a porous plaster. Front and back.

There is no monotony in Middle Atlantic atmosphere here. It may be soupy, stringy and over-germed. But it gets you. Your Middle Atlantic man breathes like two police whistles, his eyes look like warmed-over waffles and his nose would scare a bull. But he always manages to edge through a winter, and lasts long enough to plank that income tax on the line on March 15 as the crow flies.

What we like about our weather is that it's competitive. You either draw a bye or are eliminated. It weeds out the timid and the cowardly. Anybody can exist at Palm Beach or Hollywood. But when it comes to living in the East, you have to renew your membership card every day.

We waited until close to spring before writing this because we weren't sure we were going to make the grade ourselves.

Vote Fraud Sentences

It Is to Be Hoped the Penalties Will Safeguard Future Elections

The penalties dealt out by Judge F. P. Schoonmaker in the United States District Court to the first of the 54 persons called for sentence for falsifying and altering ballots in the Congressional election of 1932 range from a maximum of 18 months in the penitentiary and a $1 fine to one day in jail and a $1,000 fine.

These sentences may seem severe; but that is only because we have become accustomed to lighter punishment for similar offenses in the local state courts.

Less than a year before the commission of the election frauds of 1932 several hundred persons were indicted in the Quarter Sessions Court for alleged violations of the election laws in 1931, and scores of them pleaded guilty or were convicted by juries. Not one of the culprits failed to receive a parole or suspension of sentence.

This inevitably created the impression that the courts did not regard cheating at the polls as a very serious crime.

It is to be hoped the penalties imposed in Federal Court will disabuse the minds of persons inclined to cheat of that notion and will serve to protect the honesty of future elections.

An Important Case

The Question of Responsibility for Air Pollution Is Involved.

Not because of the amount of money at stake, but because of the principles involved, the case of John A. Thompson against the American Steel and Wire Company, in which a Common Pleas Court jury awarded the plaintiff a verdict for $9,215 yesterday, is of considerable importance to this district.

Thompson said that gases and dust from the steel company's plant at Donora damaged vegetation on his nearby farm.

The case raises the question of responsibility for industrial pollution of the air, and of the possibility of preventing it. This is of lively interest not only to those whose vegetation may be damaged but to all who live in the vicinity of Pittsburgh, because there is evidence that our high mortality rate from pneumonia is connected with industrial contamination of the atmosphere.

In 1923, when the death rate from pneumonia in Pittsburgh was 374.4 per 100,000 of population, the highest ever recorded, the amount of solid matter, due to smoke, which rained on the city averaged 1,400 tons per square mile, while in 1930, when the pneumonia death rate had dropped to 229.8 per 100,000 of population, the amount of solids precipitated from the air was down to 1,000 tons per square mile. Moreover, the death rate from pneumonia is highest in the wards which, because of the presence of mills, have the greatest amount of air pollution.

It is encouraging to know that the Bureau of Smoke Regulation, the Mellon Institute of Industrial Research and the Pittsburgh station of the United States Bureau of Mines are profoundly interested in it and are seeking a remedy for air pollution evils.

Our Little Crime Bill

Only Fifteen Thousand Million a Year.

The most authentic figures on crime that we have been able to obtain—figures assembled by the National Crime Commission and checked against reports of the Department of Justice and of one of the large insurance companies—show that the United States has each year:

1. Twelve thousand murders.
2. Three thousand kidnapings.
3. Fifty thousand robberies.
4. Five thousand cases of arson.
5. One hundred thousand assaults.
6. Forty thousand burglaries.

That seems like a fair list for a country devoted to life, liberty and the pursuit of happiness.

The best estimates we can get of the cost of these activities run as follows:

1. Prevention or punishment of crime, upkeep of jails and prisons, loss of property by fraud or arson, THIRTEEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS.

2. Illicit traffic in narcotics, TWO THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS.

All this, of course, plus various other sums which can hardly be computed, such as the toll taken annually by racketeers, which must be even greater than that of other forms of crime.

Even without these, however, the bill totals up to something like FIFTEEN THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS, an amount which your mind cannot grasp, but to which you as a citizen contribute in one form or another.

If you have ever been through the Panama Canal you have been amazed by the gigantic task which was performed there of cutting through an entire isthmus, creating lakes, building mammoth dams, installing costly lock machinery, etc.

Well, the price of that whole canal, complete, was only [illegible] of the nation's annual bill for the illicit narcotic [illegible]

[illegible] guess the cost of our public school sys- [illegible] n and city in the land you would find the sum too large for comprehension. Yet it is only about ONE-THIRD of the nation's annual bill for crime.

There is not much point in elaborating these comparisons. But the two above may give you some slight idea of what lawlessness costs your Uncle Sam—and you.

Relative Fiddling

Highbrows Are Puzzled.

The one thing Prof. Albert Einstein really feared was the criticism that as a fiddle player he knew all about the fourth dimension.

The great scientist, whose theories are said to be understood clearly by only a handful of highbrows, took his debut as a concert violinist with great seriousness. He played before a distinguished private audience at the residence of Mr. Adolph Lewisohn.

Like any boy making a first appearance in public, the world-famous doctor practiced nervously for three hours before he started the concert. We can't say whether he made mistakes or not, whether he played well or not. The professor asked that nothing be said about it. We can say, however, that everybody applauded with enthusiasm when he had finished.

Where He Belongs

(Copyright, 1934.)

To a very great degree the national election of 1920 was decided on this issue.

The League of Nations had been established. Determined administration efforts were made to get us into the League. Those efforts were defeated in the Unitd States Senate, and in the first election following the Administration party was overwhelmingly defeated, with the League of Nations as a paramount issue. That should have settled matters. However—

When the League Court was later set up this country recognized it as a back-door entrance to the League itself. And this country remained out of the League Court.

Now propaganda again endeavors to lead us into the League Court, which would mean inevitably into the League also. Congress must not be deceived by the propagandists.

The American people want to maintain American independence, not endanger it in foreign entanglements.

NEW YORK DAY BY DAY

By O. O. McIntyre

NEW YORK, March 7.—Elisabeth Cobb, in private life Mrs. Alton Brody, has, with her third successful novel, taken a place alongside her illustrious father in the realm of creative fiction. She is a striking brunette in early thirties and mother of two children.

The only child, she is the apple of her father's eye. And in turn is his most appreciative audience. Much of her leisure is spent in his company and she has inherited largely his gift for spinning yarns. Turned out by a glossy finishing school, her early life was spent in Florence.

The backgrounds of her novels were salvaged from real life. She has traveled with Ringling's circus as an equestrienne and one of the few outsiders admitted to the close-knit inside sawdust circles. She has also voyaged on cattle boats as well as being a member of Easthampton's "younger set."

To her intimates she is "Buff," a relic of her baby efforts to pronounce Elisabeth. Her mother, Mrs. Irvin Cobb, always inconspicuous, is "Mowie" to the entire Cobb clan. Her gentleness, patience and encouragement have been large factors in both the success of her husband and daughter. And they adore her.

In one of those periodical shakeups that come to editorial shops, I once became an advertising solicitor. In the sudden spin of what proved to be a very brief curve, I called on "a prospect" in the old Putnam Building, where the Paramount Theater stands. For no reason, save perhaps my cheekiness in being alive, I was outrageously abused and ordered to make myself scarce. Many sleepless nights I dramatized myself as sitting before a row of push buttons in state while my tormentor called, hat in hand. But life reverses fiction. The other day I saw him for the first time since my humiliation. He was at the great desk with the battery of push-buttons. And I'll kiss a pig if I wasn't standing before him, hat in hand.

At the Colony today the price of an order of mushrooms touched off a fright wig effect. Awk! I thought of the first man to eat mushrooms in our town. He ran the wagon yard where mushrooms grew as big as Al Smith's derby and as thick as red ants at a picnic. Nobody in our town had ever heard of mushrooms and for years he was known as "Crazy Dutch who eats toadstools."

'Pet Names' for Wives

You can never tell what will break a woman's heart—or get her goat!

Now, a woman demands a divorce from her husband (according to a radio speaker), because in all her married life, he has never addressed her as anything but "Mrs."

Great grief! How many of us married women could have told this lucky little woman that there are a hundred "pet names" and other things, which a husband can and does call his wife, which are far more painful to the vanity and harder to endure than "Mrs." They run all the way from "You!" to "Old Thing!"

Indeed, "The Missus" is sometimes used by husbands as a term of tenderness or affection.

And husbands can call their wives other things, even meaner and less flattering than "YOU!" or "Old Thing" or "Old Dear."

* * *

Some years ago, a woman applied for a divorce because her husband had called her "a yellow old hag." Well, wouldn't YOU want a divorce after that? Or would you just slip a little ground glass in his coffee?

Most women think that about the meanest thing that a man can call a woman is "FAT." But Rudyard Kipling set a new low for husbands, and probably broke up thousands of homes, when he called woman "a rag-a-bone-and-a-hank-of-hair!"

I knew of one man who lost a perfectly good wife by referring to her as a "last year's model"—implying that she was getting a bit passe. And that surely is the tombstone on the grave of any man's love!

* * *

Of course, every woman is proud of being a woman, in these days; but many a gal has felt like flinging all the bridge prizes in the house at her darling's head because he addressed her as "WOMAN!" Just like that!

There are certain pet names which never fail to be effective with any woman. Every woman, young or old, loves to be called "Cutie" or "Kid" or "Little Girl," no matter how hefty she is, how many chins she has, nor how long she has been putting henna on her hair. And to be called "Beautiful Doll" always thrills her, even when she knows that her wave is flat and her nose is shiny.

But almost any complimentary, affectionate or diminutive pet name pleases a woman, from angel-cake to funny-face. And, as appeared in this column a number of years ago, "the honeymoon is not over, until he stops calling her darling (or sweetiepie or Cutie)—and begins calling her "SAY!"

'LOVE THEM TO LIFE'

By Winifred Black

"Low, low.
Sweet and low.
Wind of the western sea.
While my little one,
While my pretty one,
S-l-ee-ee-ee-p-s."

That's Ole out in the barn. He's singing the muley cow to sleep.

Don't laugh at Ole. He knows his business, Ole does.

He's been reading all about the new theory of cattle raising, and he's putting that theory into practice.

Ole has the greatest respect in the world for education. Didn't the professor from the agricultural college lecture at the grange the other night and tell the farmers that the way to make a cow give good milk and plenty of it, was to sing her to sleep, like a baby?

Poor Ole—you'd have known that years ago, if you'd ever been "home on the range," like the singing cowboys.

And the restless cattle will stop their bellowing and fidgeting and walk calmly along under the stars.

I don't know why they do it, but they do.

I've seen them a dozen times, and so has anyone who has ever been "home, home on the range."

I wonder if we, any of us, realize, just how much our own moods have to do with the moods of creatures and even of things around us?

I know a woman who can snip a twig off any tree or any plant or any vine, stick it in the ground and the next time you go to see her, there it is all "agrowing and ablowing like 1 o'clock" as they say in Devon, in merry England.

I asked her about it the other day.

"Have you any system of your own?" I said.

"Goodness no," she said. "I just love 'em to life—that's all.

"Plants are like children, they have to be loved or they can't grow strong and healthy."

"Do you know the dog that belongs to the surly old fellow down the street?

Sing away Ole, you're on the right track.

Don't you mind if they do laugh at you.

Maybe the first thing you know you'll sing a yodel song and wouldn't it be fun if you could teach the brindle cow to yodel, too?

LISTEN, WORLD!

I Do Not Believe in 'The American Standard of Living'

I do not believe in our vaunted "American Standard of Living." I do not believe that our lives need to be filled with luxurious gadgets or all our money and energy squandered in procuring them. I do not believe that we should try continually to "keep up with the Joneses." I do not believe that this thing which we call American Success is profitable, either for the individual or the nation.

To the contrary, I believe that our wild scramble for Fuller and Fatter living has ended in depriving most of us of the real adventures and values of life . . . and has demoralized the creator as well as the consumer . . . the Big Shot as well as the underdog.

I'd have been boiled in oil if I had said these things five years ago . . . blackballed by many clubs; blackjacked by manufacturers. Five years ago we had but three ideas in this country!

MAKE ALL YOU CAN.
SELL ALL YOU CAN.
BUY ALL YOU CAN.

We had no definite, general plan concerning how much we should make . . . who should make it . . . under what conditions it should be made . . . or what the worker himself should receive for the making. Nor had we had any plan for buying. No balance was established between production and consumption, earning and spending.

Make! Sell! Buy! Like the sound of jungle tom-toms, these three words beat upon our foolish brains, throbbed in our fevered blood . . . drove us on regardless.

And upon these three words we established "American Standard of Living." Actually, it wasn't a standard of "living" at all. It was a standard of buying and selling . . . a mania for accumulation. And in that frenzy of accumulation . . . in the work and worry entailed . . . we lost sight of LIVING. Had no time for LIVING. Became incapable of LIVING.

So what happened. Our markets were cluttered with merchandise, our homes were cluttered with gadgets . . . and our mail was cluttered with bills.

Presently, inevitably, THE CONSUMER WENT BROKE . . . THE PRODUCER WENT BANKRUPT . . . THE NATION WENT INTO A TAILSPIN.

What did our popeyed "standard of living" do for us? That's what it did. And that's why I don't believe in that "American Standard of Living" which, for 10 disastrous years, we followed to our complete demoralization.

I don't believe it was either American . . . or Standard . . . or Living. Instead I believe it was a stupid, greedy, heartless regime which landed us where such a regime will always land any nation—on the junk pile.

But now? Now we seem to be learning sense.

So we're going back to that real AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING upon which our nation was founded. That standard wasn't based on the QUANTITY OF THINGS A MAN COULD SELL OR BUY. It was based on the QUALITY OF LIFE WHICH WAS GAINED THEREBY.

LIFE—a sense of adventure and achievement — time for love and play and study as well as work—a chance for men and women to became free and happy and proud—that was the ideal upon which the REAL AMERICAN STANDARD OF LIVING was based.

If we go back to that standard, America and Americans will LIVE. If we don't we're DOOMED!

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE clerk of the New York Criminal Court bawls out a name. The heads in the crowded hall of justice turn towards the iron-grated door at the side, and mine turns with them. For, case-hardened though we reporters get to be, there is always drama in the opening and shutting of that barred door. Harry Thaw, Roland Molineaux, Charley Becker, Nan Patterson, Abe Hummel and Dr. Waite—all in their day had filed through it.

This time, through the sinister portal, comes a tall, broad, flaxen-haired young man, just turning thirty. A flicker of a smile plays about his lips. Meeting him on the avenue you might have picked him for last year's All-America fullback. Certainly he is the best dressed man in the room, and that means something with the lawyers of the day aping the sartorially elegant Martin Littleton, and the boys in the press box affecting spats and canes.

The old clerk peers at the prisoner, and then barks:

"What's your true name?"

"Robert Arthur Tourbillon."

"Have you anything to say why the sentence of this court should not be pronounced upon you?"

"No."

Judge Edward Swann, of the Court of General Sessions of the State of New York, clears his throat and adjusts his classes.

"Tourbillon," he begins, in the severe voice which comes natural to all judges, "you are as smooth a rascal as ever came before me. You stand here a convicted robber, but you are more than that. You are a real Raffles, a dangerous character, and all the more so because of your glib tongue and fine clothes. I sentence you to five years at hard labor in Sing Sing Prison."

Paris, France. Ten years later—the spring of 1924. Detectives Jim McCoy and Charley Kane, of New York City, cool their heels in the ante-chamber of the chief of police, waiting for some word of a French criminal wanted in the States for robbery. And, as they wait, two Paris detectives enter with a suspect they have taken in a swindling case.

McCoy's eyes bulge in astonishment. He nudges Kane and whispers:

'Do you see what I see?"

"Absolutely," blurts Kane. "It's Dapper Don Collins."

The prisoner turned a cool eye on them.

"Don Collins?" he asked. "Why, no, sir. I am Arthur Hussey."

But those New York coppers knew their man and back with them he went—Robert Arthur Tourbillion, alias Dapper Don Collins.

Suspected Of Counterfeiting

NEW YORK CITY, ten years later—February 7, 1934—the lineup room in police headquarters. One by one the fishes are picked from the haul of the night before and marked for the notice of the 200 detectives assembled. A seedy man, looking older than his years, needing a shave and wearing a plain dark grey suit, a cheap hat, black shoes and a light brown coat, is stood up on the platform under the savage spotlight.

An inspector reads his record: "Robert Arthur Tourbillon, alias Dapper Don Collins, alias Stephen Daily, alias "Rat" Tourbeville, alias Thomas Watson, alias Gus Larson, alias Charles A. Cromwell, alias Arthur Tyler, alias Edgar George, alias George P. Martin, alias Arthur Hussey—thief, bootlegger and confidence man."

The secret service have taken Don this time on suspicion of counterfeiting, but no case can be made against him and he goes free again.

Half of the 30 years since he came north from Atlanta as a young man, have been spent in prison and the other half in avoiding the police. And when he says: "I've been blamed for a thousand things I never did," the cynical police answer: "Yes, and have gone unpunished for a thousand things you did do."

And so Don Collins, no longer "Dapper," is circulating again. But he's marked in every detective bureau in the world, and over his head hangs the menace of a life sentence on another conviction. A big-time criminal once—now only another ageing, weary miscreant, who is playing his last cards in the game nobody beats.

Brilliant Future Seen for Canada

TO the north of our American states, across a border of mountain, prairie and water, lies a young nation which should be the darling of the future — the Dominion of Canada. For a hundred and twenty years there has never been a gesture of armed conflict between the United States and her closest neighbor. From time to time, irritating circumstances have arisen, over fisheries, tariffs—over liquor running, in the days before repeal. But never a very serious difference in the whole sweep of a century and a quarter.

All this comes to mind in noting that the Canadian press gives large importance to the suggestion of our own minister to Canada, W. D. Robbins, that the best and quickest way to bring about the return of prosperity to both countries is for Canada and the United States to work hand in hand, to consult each other constantly, to be of mutual help.

Canada's recovery, without resort to the powerful stimulants injected this side of the border by Dr. Roosevelt, has been remarkable. A good deal of that recovery has been due to the very human element of neighborliness, as the Montreal Star comments.

Canada can thank her lucky stars that she remains a farming country, with few large cities. The family which lives upon its own soil, grows its own food, cuts its own woodpile, is more independent, better able to withstand economic shocks, than the people who drift to the big cities and tie themselves to the machine. The happy homestead, East or West, as ever, is one where the man has his meat and potatoes laid away against the winter; where his wife has her shelves full of home-grown fruits and preserves.

'Chiseling' the Air Corps Hit by Democrats

By James T. Williams, Jr.

THE truth about the Army Air Corps was told to the Democratic House of Representatives by one of its own members—Representative Martin, of Oregon—a Democrat of Democrats.

Here is what he said in part:

"If you want to help to preserve the Army and make it efficient, vote for generous appropriation bills when they come up. This will help build up the Army and make it efficient. When it comes to the question of politics do not say that our air service is no good. If you will pass the proper laws and the proper appropriations, you will have a proper air service, but if you chisel in on them, you will cut them down and humiliate the air service."

For weeks the recommendations of the Secretary of War for the building up of the Army Air Corps, in pursuance of established policy to equality with the strongest, have been before Congress.

Policy a Fruit of Morrow Board

THIS general policy for the development of American air power is one of the best fruits of the Morrow board. This board, of which the late Dwight W. Morrow was chairman, was appointed by President Coolidge in 1925 to study and recommend the best ways and means to build up the strength of America in the air.

This board was in no sense partisan; representatives of both political parties and of both houses of Congress and representatives from outside of Congress were included in its membership, and among its declarations of policies was the following:

"We do not consider it wise, however, to make definite plans for such an extended period as 10 years. We consider a plan looking forward to a period of not more than five years more prudent. We therefore do not recommend full realization of the plan of the Lassiter board, but rather that the matter be made the subject of further study by competent authority."

It was in pursuance of this recommendation that the War Department general staff, assisted by the chief of the Air Corps and other officers, restudied the whole problem of Army aviation.

On the sound foundation provided by the Morrow board, legislation was enacted by Congress creating the five-year program and fixing the ratio of the number of planes to be allotted to the Army and Navy. The only reason why progress toward this objective has not been more rapid is because Congress under the last administration failed to do its part and make appropriations of sufficient size to complete the program on schedule time.

2,000 Planes Held Necessary

WHEN Mr. Dern became Secretary of War, one of the first problems he tackled was that of bringing the Army Air Corps up to the strength required for its mission in the national defense. As a result of the studies made by the general staff, with the assistance of the officers of the Air Corps, the advances in aircraft engineering sciences and the broader view of the best ways and means of employing aircraft effectively developed a variety of opinions regarding the proper doctrine, strength, distribution and organization of military air forces.

As a result of these studies and in pursuance of the common aim to bring up the Army Air Corps to the strength contemplated under the established policy of the national defense in the air, it was decided that the immediate need was the expansion of the air corps to include a homogeneous air unit to be known as the G. H. Q. air force.

It was found that the air corps strength should be increased to two thousand planes. It was found that there was a shortage of four hundred officers and sixty-two hundred enlisted men. A bill to provide these additions was introduced early last month. It was indorsed by the chairman of the House Committee on Military Affairs, Congressman [illegible] Swain, who expressed himself highly pleased with the prog[illegible] Other members of the comm[illegible] were equally gratified, apparen[illegible] The Army high command, including the chief of the Air Corps were united at that time on this plan.
